THE RIGHT WING VS. CHILD PORN

If you listen only to the Christian conservatives, you might get the impression that pornography and child porn are one and the same. For them, it seems axiomatic that porn exploits minors. They might also have you believing that even legitimate producers of adult materials secretly wish they could exploit those under the legal age.

I'm sick and tired of being painted with this same wide, dirty brush. As a pornographer, I reject the idea that porn and the exploitation of children are equivalent. This is a trick used by the right wing to cloud the issue. It masks their true uptight, puritanical, antisex attitudes.

The models who appear in this magazine and in our adult videos are all of legal age. This is true for all performers in the legitimate XXX field.

As the father of five kids, I also resent the notion that I would have anything to do with child exploitation. People working in adult entertainment are no different than those who work in other fields; we all recognize the need to nurture and protect the precious resource that our children represent. That all children represent.

So to the right wing I say this: Look for your perverts closer to home. These days, it would seem that most of America's pedophiles are either in the church or the Republican Party.

Only in America

I am a lifelong HUSTLER reader, and it's great to see your magazine providing a forum for something as important as politics. In the past year, HUSTLER has risen to the task of covering the abuses of the Bush Administration better than any other adult magazine. Thank you for showing the President for what he truly is.

You present a trustworthy voice to those who mistrust the mainstream media. Only in America do we impeach a President who lied about a blowjob and reelect his successor, who lied in order to take our country to war.

XXXer's Family Tree

Is porn star Cytherea of Greek ancestry? Her name is the same as a Greek pasta that's not only the shape of a little dick, but also grows when it's boiled in water.

—T.V.

Johnson Creek, Wisconsin

The Goddess of Gush informs us she is part Mexican and part Native American—Creek, to be precise. In ancient Greece, Aphrodite—the goddess of love and beauty—was also known as Cytherea, having risen from the Sea of Cythera. The Romans' equivalent deity was Venus. Despite their supernatural powers, we don't believe either figure was renowned for squirting. No wonder Cytherea, who last graced our September '05 edition, is so fucking special.

Pushing the Envelope

I went to one of the first showings of Rob Zombie's new film, The Devil's Rejects, and I thought it was cool that vintage HUSTLER images were used and credited. I also thought it was great that Ginger Lynn Allen made an appearance. I wish there were more movies that push the envelope of counterculture. In this age of repression, no wonder pop culture encourages people to be ignorant and illiterate. How many kids today have read George Orwell's 1984 or Animal Farm, or Ray Bradbury's Fahrenheit 451?

I am glad that there are still filmmakers with the balls to make people stop and think, shaking them out of their complacency. I wish more kids would view movies about the '60s and '70s era. Today's youth know nothing of Vietnam and Watergate. They've been brainwashed into believing they can trust the government without question.

Mr. Flynt, you got us the girl we all remember, the one who had the bad (i.e., good) reputation of being loose and easy. You had the guts and insight to know that this was and still is the kind of girl that porn lovers want to see. Showcasing ladies as stunning as any beauty pageant queens, all your pictorials are great.

I remember the first days of HUSTLER, when the government was all over you. Y o u (continued on page 191)

LETTERS FROM OUR TROOPS

What's up, HUSTLER? I'm a Marine writing from Iraq. Our outfit got sent here almost two months ago, and for most of us this is our second tour of duty. As I'm sure you already know, Marines really love HUSTLER.

The guys and I were wondering if you could hook us up with some hot DVDs. Here's a list of our favorite XXX stars in order: Krystal Steal (the best!), Jenna Haze, Carmen Luvana, Jesse Jane, Tera Patrick, Lexie Marie, Monica Sweetheart, Kimberly Franklin, Natalia Cruze and Teagan Presley. We appreciate anything you can do for us.

I'm a paratrooper currently stationed in Afghanistan. Recently I obtained a copy of your October '05 edition from a buddy of mine. Of course, I expected beautiful women and hot sex, but I never expected to find your magazine proudly flaunting such an abundance of great articles on a variety of controversial subjects.

I knew at once that I had to become a subscriber, but there have been some major obstacles. The computers here with Internet access have HUSTLER's Web site blocked, and we are unable to dial 1-800 telephone numbers. Can you send me the paperwork required for a subscription? And thanks for supporting America's troops. We really appreciate it.

A Bush/Halliburton Development

Don't worry about the displaced moving back into the community; they can't afford it!

HUSTLER Parody: This is not a real ad. This is social commentary on how our pro-corporate government once again screwed Americans with Halliburton no-bid contracts, limited FEMA handouts and the suspension of the Davis-Bacon Act. Check out NewOrleans.IndyMedia.org for more information. This political parody may be reproduced, in written publications and on the Internet, but only in its entirety and without modification or alteration of any kind for nonprofit and noncommercial purposes, without further permission of HUSTLER Magazine or L.F.P., Inc.

Ever since Day One, HUSTLER has said that right-wing, born-again Christian fundamentalists are not terribly bright. Now comes irrefutable proof: The Reverend Kyle Lake—pastor of the University Baptist Church in Waco, Texas—was electrocuted during a baptizing ritual in front of 800 churchgoers.

Standing in waist-deep water, the high-profile preacher reached out to grab a microphone—and KA-BLAMMO! The Lord God smote the Bible thumper into kingdom come with a holy jolt of Old Testament-style vengeance. Apparently, Lake—like the rest of his flock—was unaware of the cold, hard fact that water conducts electricity. Now that's stupid!

The woman whom Reverend Lake was about to “save” hadn’t yet stepped into the baptismal pool and was uninjured. However, that wasn’t because of any braininess on her part. It was just the lady’s good fortune that Lake grabbed the mike before she could saunter into the water.

With the Rev smoldering like a burning bush, the entire stunned congregation fell into a lemminglike trance of feverish prayer. But God wasn’t swayed. No, sirree. The laws of both physics and electricity would not be reversed.

Lake, known for his ability to keep cred with churchgoing younguns (who presumably are even dumber than their mentor had been), was pronounced dead at 33—the very same age, it’s believed, that Jesus was crucified.

Specializing in youth outreach, Lake worked zealously to make religious conformity cool while indoctrinating the Lone Star State’s future doctors, researchers and educators with mindless dogma. The University Baptist Church is not only located in a deeply conservative and evangelical part of Texas, but is also a mere 14 miles from Crawford. That cowtown is the seemingly too-frequent vacation home of another Christian fundamentalist idiot, President George W. Bush.

The church is unofficially affiliated with Baylor University, the largest Baptist learning institution on the planet and the oldest. Baylor was chartered in 1845, back when Texas was a republic soon to become America’s 28th state. (Of course, around the likes of Waco, Lubbock and Amarillo these days, you’d almost think that Texas was still a sovereign nation.)

Baylor University itself is so steeped in religious fervor that its Latin motto is Pro Ecclesia, Pro Texana—For Church, For Texas. Lake attended seminary there and, after graduating, stuck around to help sucker a steady parade of repressed and impressionable students into the Jesus Christ and Republican faiths.

Published in 2004 was the soon-to-be-smitten minister’s book Understanding God’s Will: How to Hack the Equation Without Formulas. In his droll treatise, Lake—ironically applying the law of electricity—explained why shit happens: “God’s will is not the path of least resistance!”

Another telling passage from Lake’s tome: “Life transformation isn’t an accident.” You were right, Kyle, and your grandiose centerstage demise didn’t come as a shocker to us. What were you about to say anyway?

Naturally, residents of Waco and nearby hamlets are teary-eyed and blathering about the tragic, untimely death of the so-called rock star pastor. The University Baptist Church’s congregation includes the David Crowder Band. As if America needs another Christian rock ‘n’ roll group flying high as a kite on Jesus—and not even as cool as Stryper.

But we say: Sometimes the Good Lord works in not-so-mysterious ways. Reverend Lake—like all his narrow-minded, fire-and-brimstone Southern Baptist brethren—had it coming. A fundamental knowledge of science, the very thing these anti-evolutionists perpetually rail against, could have saved his skinny ass!

Put another way, Kyle Lake was just too stupid to live. And Gawd, in his infinite wisdom, saw fit to thin him from the herd. Hallelujah!

Farts in the Wind

David Vitter, a Republican U.S. senator from Louisiana, is responsible for inserting a clause into the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 that gives military recruiters access to campuses, as well as names, addresses and telephone numbers of high school students. Vitter’s stealth move established that schools which do not cooperate risk losing federal funding. Since informed parents can exempt their kids, opponents of the clause are pushing for an amendment making notification mandatory.

Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton

(D-New York) returned a $1,000 campaign donation from Larry Flynt. Troubled by a popular video game’s violent and sexual content, she also encouraged a Federal Trade Commission probe of Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas. Since when is a Clinton squeamish about sex? 🍑

Not News to Us

We've been saying the same thing since the day he first became President. Thanks to a HUSTLER reader for submitting this photo taken from a broadcast of Rupert Murdoch's Sky News. Since Murdoch also owns Fox News, we finally get some truth from one of his media outlets.

NEWSBITES

Cost of Loving

How much would you pay to get a little on the side? In Argentina a married man had to cough up the equivalent of $18,000 for having an extramarital affair. Finding the roaming Romeo guilty of "hurting his spouse's morals," a judge ordered him to make compensation. We say he got off cheap compared to Bill Clinton and Kobe Bryant.

Motion of the Ocean

The Belgian Coast Guard sprung into action after receiving a report of a man and woman "struggling at sea." When a search vessel arrived, it was discovered the couple weren't drowning at all. They were fucking. Despite their protests, the aquatic lovebirds were forced onto a life raft, naked as jaybirds. We guess a rescuer insisted upon performing CPR on the nude chick. Well, that's what we would have done.

Love Hurts

A 53-year-old woman from Thailand got the ultimate revenge on her straying husband. The missus cut off his penis after he requested she make love to him once more before leaving her for another woman. The butchering bride hoped that by removing her mate's member, he'd stop philandering and stick around. Yeah, like things worked out so well for Lorena Bobbitt.

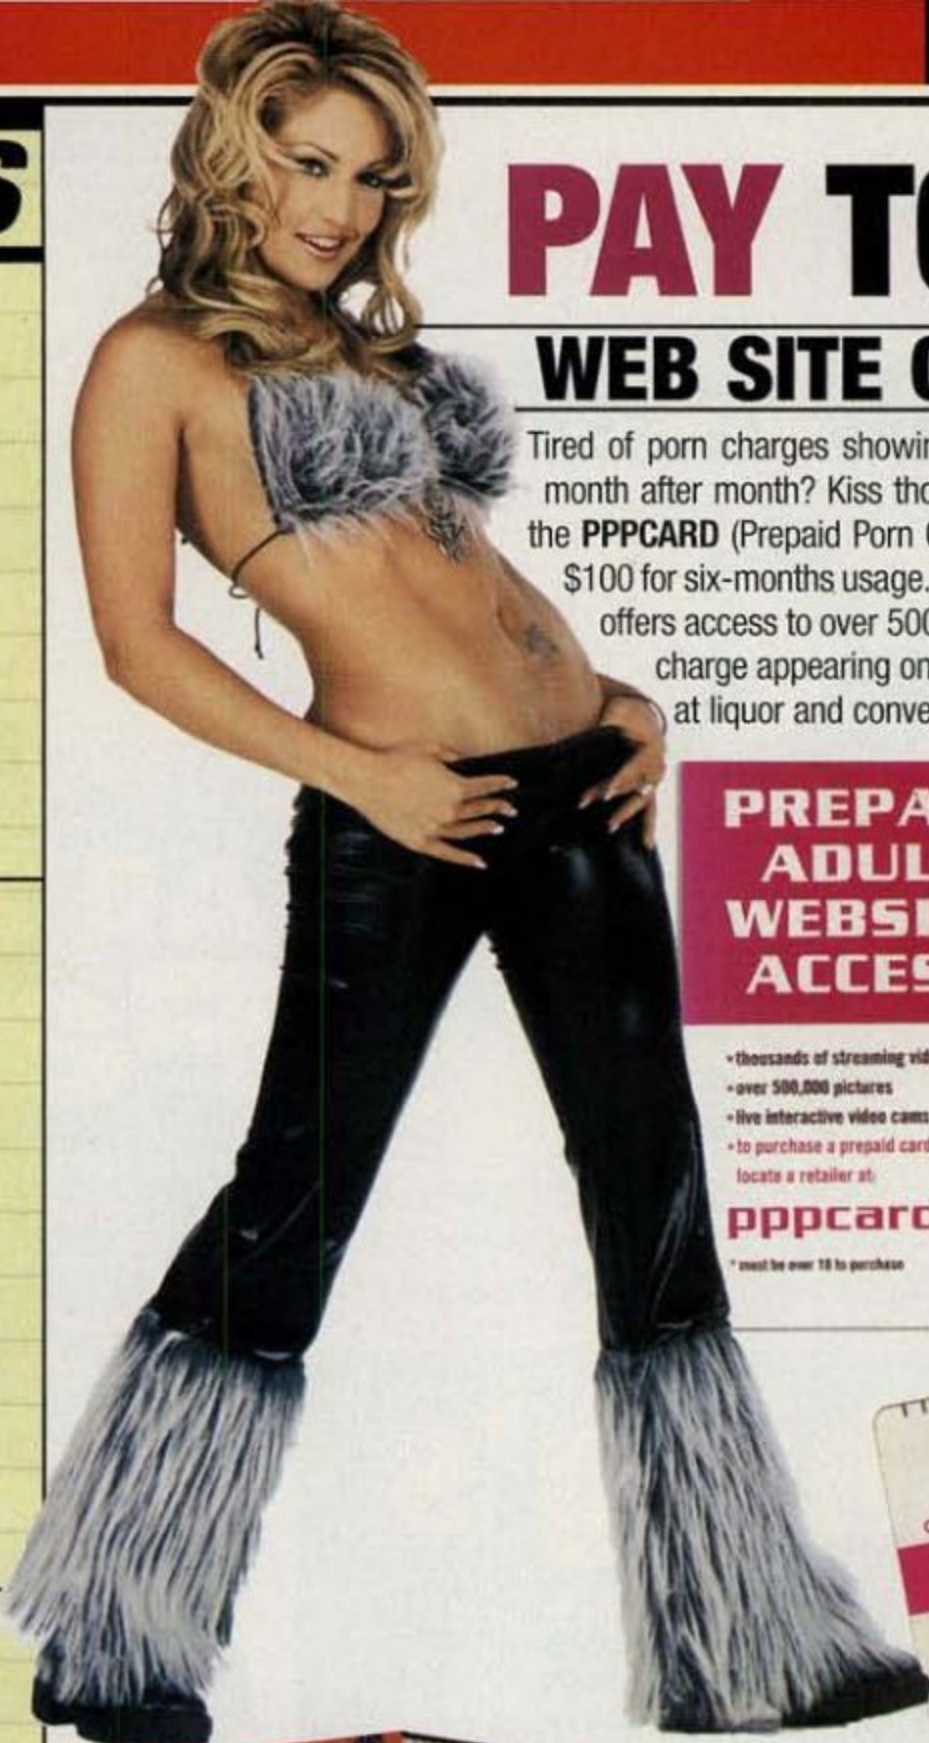

Nuts About Cooking

A man pretending to be an Australian chef duped organizers of the World Testicle Cooking Championship in Serbia. Officials were upset because they had prepared a lavish reception (complete with band) and ordered up a batch of kangaroo balls for the supposed Down Under chap, who never showed up. What makes this otherwise-lame story interesting is that there really is a World Testicle Cooking Championship.

The Happiest Place on Earth

What kind of a sick and twisted mind could conjure up this scene of Snow White being diddled by The Seven Dwarfs? None other than those of '60s radical Paul Krassner and Mad magazine contributor Wally Wood.

"Disneyland Memorial Orgy" was originally published in 1967 as a centerspread in Krassner's outrageous satirical magazine The Realist. This is just a small portion of the parody masterpiece that is now available as a poster at the former Yippie's Web site, PaulKrassner.com.

VICTORIA

Calling this Czech cutie an exhibitionist is an understatement. "I have always loved showing off my body," Victoria declares. "After all, we come into this world naked. Why do we have to wear clothes?" Not surprisingly, the 21-year-old considers herself a rebel. "I'm a bit of a Catholic girl gone bad. My upbringing was very strict. I had to go to a private Catholic school—you know, wearing those uniforms. I hated it. So now I do whatever and whomever I want."

Getting Victoria to talk about sex is a breeze. "I love to fuck," she confesses, "but not the traditional bedroom missionary stuff. I'm into screwing around and playing with my pussy in public. I get off thinking of total strangers watching me as the wind blows on my nude body. That makes me come over and over again."

A CROSS TO BARE

A full-page photograph of a woman with long, dark, wavy hair, posing on a red velvet chaise longue with ornate gold-colored metalwork. She is lying on her side, facing away from the camera but looking back over her shoulder with a slight smile. She is wearing black leather thigh-high boots. The background consists of a wire mesh fence and some greenery. The lighting is warm, suggesting late afternoon or early evening. A text box is overlaid in the upper right corner.

What kind of lover does the brazen brunette want? "I need a guy who can share my adventures and is willing to give it to me anywhere and anytime. Plus, he has to have a good job, a sense of humor and a really big cock!" Hey, two out of three ain't bad.

Looking ahead, Victoria plans to bless us with more nude photos. "This is my first HUSTLER spread," she proclaims proudly. "I love the fact that people are checking me out naked. God gave me this wonderful body, and I think it would be a sin not to share it with everyone."

MRS. VOYEUR

I almost tumbled out of the closet when the rimming started. A brunette was licking all over my husband's butt, inching closer and closer to his ass crack. Then, finally, she pushed her taster into his rosebud.

Jammed between some dresses and peeking out of a two-inch gap, I was spying on my mate and the beauty he had brought to our own bed. I admired the babe's sweet curves as she pushed her ass high in the air. Now she was literally dicking Dan's browneye with her tongue, making him claw the mattress. Oh, my God! His starfish was sopping wet with her spit. And then it was like he suddenly remembered I was watching, and he turned my way and winked.

Dan had done good tonight. The girl was just my type—lithe and slender, with a boyish haircut and a kind of rock 'n' roll, tomboy attitude. You see, fact is, I'm the one sending my husband out to pick up other women. I am what you'd call a true voyeur. I live to watch.

It all began two months ago, when Dan and I were strolling home from a restaurant one night. Passing through a park, we heard moaning and heavy breathing—the unmistakable sounds of sex. And then we saw the lovebirds, probably two college kids, rolling around half-naked in the grass. Fuck, I was mesmerized! Dan's pretty discreet, and he urged me to keep walking, but I tugged on his sleeve. When that didn't work, I grabbed his crotch. He stopped then.

I'm not sure how to explain the situation, but it was so damn hot! It felt dirty, sexy and good, spying on lovers. Down on all fours, the girl was giving the guy a blowjob. Slowly her mouth moved from base to tip, over and over, till her partner's ass was bucking off the ground. I don't think they could see us. Then again, I don't think they would have cared. Both were totally absorbed in the gal's sloppy sucking. Dan and I were totally absorbed watching.

I slipped one hand inside my skirt and started jilling off. Once Dan got over his initial shock, he moved behind me to dry-hump my booty. He then slipped his hands under my top and began scissoring my taut nipples. Then he pawed my skirt, tugging down his zipper. But his prick was barely inside me before I was coming like there was no tomorrow. Watching sex, having sex—it was like sensory overload. I climaxed so hard, I could hardly walk home. Seriously, my legs were trembling.

From that night on, I was hooked. I had discovered my real nature, and regular sex just didn't do it for me anymore. It wasn't exciting enough. Oh, we tried watching porn, but it wasn't the same. I craved live action. So I finally mentioned the idea of picking up girls to my husband. Not surprisingly, Dan was all for it, and we fell into a wonderful Saturday night routine.

But this was the best Saturday night yet. The brunette was definitely the sexiest—and nastiest—of the lot. Tucked in my hiding place, I could hear her tell my husband how anal she was and how she'd love to feel his big, fat dick ramming her butt.

By the time I grabbed my favorite vibrator, the bitch was facedown on the bed, and Dan—who's pretty well-hung—was tamping his slammer into her backdoor. Speaking from experience, well, I'd say taking him up the old dirt road ain't so easy. But this chick—Didi, I think her name was—was shoving her bum all the way back to Dan's groin in seconds, his balls slapping her labes.

The look on my husband's face was the very definition of bliss. Dan was moaning nonstop, the way he always does right before blasting off. I set the vibrator to high and started buzzing my clit. Didi came before either one of us, a quick, thrashing, intense climax. She was screaming, "Come on, baby! Spray your hot cum all over my butt! Mmmmm."

Then it was my turn. Ripples of orgasm exploded through my cunt, and I had to bite my wrist to try to shush myself in that closet. I guess I wasn't quiet enough. Just as my husband pulled out and began painting her ass globes with jizz, Didi looked straight at me and winked. Slutty exhibitionist. —L.A.

Zealots to the Left of Me, Zealots to the Right

There are days when I want to divorce myself from anything even vaguely resembling lefty media or “feminism.” Then I realize that would be a victory for the tight-assed zealots who constipate Progressive thought in the same way that tight-assed zealots like Pat Robertson, James Dobson and Tom Coburn constipate conservative thought.

My latest wave of disappointment and pissed-off betrayal results from the foaming-at-the-mouth, pig-ignorant blogger rant of some gal who claims she’s a “highly visible writer” fighting for the rights of all humanity. Her name is Kirsten Anderberg. Ever heard of her? Me neither. Well, not until someone posted her online tantrum on one of my Yahoo Groups.

Honestly, I’m generally too busy writing to eat, sleep or socialize, let alone find out which women writers are “highly visible.” I’m less inclined to find the time when I learn that the writer in question is someone still blaming her hardships on “white middle-class men” and/or having been abused as a child. I didn’t grow up in Never Never Land either, and I don’t know anyone who did. We play the cards we’re dealt, and I think that says a lot about us as people.

Anderberg is royally pissed because an interview by Democracy Now!’s Amy Goodman ran in HUSTLER [July ’04 issue]. How horrible! How dare Goodman contribute to a magazine that includes photos of naked women? [Editor’s Note: Democracy Now! declined to accept any payment or donation for Goodman’s interview—actually a reprint of a Democracy Now! broadcast—citing conflict of interest as it occasionally covers Larry Flynt's activism.] After all, everyone knows that female nudity is gross, disgusting, shameful and repulsive, right?

In her collection of online rants, found at KirstenAnderberg.com, the blogger calls Goodman a "capitalist pimp" for selling out to HUSTLER. This is ridiculous when you realize how little magazines, even HUSTLER, pay writers for articles. Anderberg also insists that Goodman is somehow a hypocrite for not having "spread her legs ... like the women she is exploiting for her profit."

Perhaps Anderberg, having never written for a publication anyone has heard of, is unfamiliar with the different employment requirements and skill sets for a writer and for an adult model. More likely, she just doesn't care. As far as Anderberg is concerned, photographs of a woman's pussy are degrading subjugation that reduces the model to nothing more than her genitals. It sounds like someone has issues with her body, and it's not Amy Goodman.

But Anderberg doesn't reserve contempt for her stand on Goodman alone. Instead, she chastises any "feminist" (which she puts in quotation marks to show her skepticism of the term being applied to anyone less fucked-up than herself) who tries to "ally themselves with the porn industry as some sort of 'sexual liberation.'" She goes on to proclaim the talking points of so many ultra-right-wing ass clowns: "The porn industry has zero to do with sexual liberation for women and is about the exploitation of women's bodies for profit, solely."

Of course, to Anderberg, the views of working porn models or performers are of no value. She declares that anyone who disagrees is full of "capitalist pimp" shit, regardless of their personal feelings, sexual orientation or reasons for making adult films. To Anderberg and her band of "feminists," I ask, exactly who is degrading and dehumanizing women here? And who is trying to force their morality on women?

Anderberg also complains about the stereotypical ultraslim porn chick body with its shaven pubes and pumped-up boobs. She completely ignores the existence of porn celebrating other body types. Anderberg—who presumably doesn't have a Vivid Girl body—isn't interested in understanding how niche content representing a variety of body types can be hot, liberating and affirming for many viewers.

To Anderberg, the world is a horrible place that torments and belittles women's power. As such, she can only see the porn industry as being as troubled as her own mind. In her sick, sad fantasy-world, porn performers are starved to be nonthreatening, packaged like meat, deformed in ways equal to Chinese foot binding and forced to undergo more oppression than men in any walk of life.

Anderberg and her ilk are utterly

"But I'll be damned if I let Anderberg take away my humanity simply because I allowed someone to photograph a particularly fun part of my body."

incapable of comprehending that all women can be fully actualized human beings. These "feminists" fail to see that all women have a right to make their own decisions—even those not to the liking of others. They can become doctors, teachers, astronauts, "highly visible" writers, porn models, directors, producers, writers or whatever they wish. The best part of this legal autonomy is that they don't need Anderberg's permission.

Ultimately, Anderberg (and her left-and right-wing siblings) have serious issues with both women and men. Sexuality is powerful. Everything in Anderberg's irrational rant indicates that she's hysterically afraid of that power. Only by convincing herself and others that porn performers are treated as less than human can Anderberg feel good about herself.

This is not to say that everyone who's shot porn has had great experiences. But name even one industry where every participant has had only positive experiences, and I'll call you a liar. Contrary to Anderberg's "feminist" wet dreams, nobody is dragging women out of their lucrative mainstream jobs and forcing them to shave their pubes, jack up their bra size or bend at the waist for a pop-shot on the ass.

People stand in line for these jobs, and not everyone who applies gets hired. And it's not just straight women who apply. Men—gay, bisexual, straight and transsexual—as well as gay, bisexual and transsexual women get into the business every day. If anyone in this industry is being turned into "meat" on camera, it's the dudes.

Anderberg insists that pussies are commoditized, their image "plastered all over the porn industry." The truth is that those pussies always come with a face, and it's the dick that stands alone. I cannot tell you how many videos I've watched without once seeing the upper body or face of the man whose unusually large penis is working so hard. I've reached a point where I identify male talent on tattoos alone.

Where is the outcry from Anderberg and her crack squad of human-rights heroes against the dehumanization of men in porn? Where is the activist movement poised at stamping out feelings of inferiority that nonporn men are feeling about their ordinary penises which cannot become erect on command or pump away forever?

Anderberg and friends have two beliefs: 1) Women don't like porn because it's technically lame; and 2) there's nothing better being made, especially nothing made specifically for women. This is a slap in the face to the producers of pornography made specifically to appeal to couples or to women purchasing "erotica" and hardcore porn with its "dehumanizing" content.

But Anderberg excels at slapping those she envies. She can't say enough nasty insults about women whose bodies are sleeker and bustier than her own. Because none of the models at Hugh Hefner's mansion bothered to assure the public that they're putting themselves through college, Anderberg shows her prejudice by assuring there's nary a woman in the industry who can do more than smile through a facial. Once again, who is demeaning, insulting and dehumanizing these women?

Frankly, I don't know whether Amy Goodman has ever posed for a "crotch-shot" or not. But I have. And if Anderberg would like to put her money where her mouth is, I'd be happy to send her an autographed copy. But I'll be damned if I let Anderberg take away my humanity simply because I allowed someone to photograph a particularly fun part of my body. And I'll be double-damned if I'll stand by to let her take away the humanity or deny the freedoms of women and men in adult entertainment who have the guts to do what she and other zealots—from the left and right wing—are too cowardly and self-loathing to do themselves.

One of the first to sound the alarm about the avian influenza pandemic was Mike Davis, a professor at the University of California, Irvine and the author of such books as City of Quartz, Ecology of Fear and most recently, The Monster at Our Door: The Global Threat of Avian Flu. Widely praised and dubbed by the San Francisco Chronicle as "the United States' most engaging prophet of doom," Davis always seems a couple of steps ahead of everyone else when it comes to exposing society's hidden fissures.

We sat down with Davis well before most people had a clue about the monster epidemic looming on our horizon. What he laid out for us—and what we now pass on to you—is a chilling look at a world where billions may die.

HUSTLER: How does bird flu jump into the human population?

MIKE DAVIS: It used to be believed, up through the mid-'90s, that birds could not directly transmit flu to humans. It was believed that pigs were required intermediaries. Pigs can get flu from humans and directly from birds. And when two different strains of flu infect the same cell of the same animal, they can exchange genes, and you can get hybrids. So you can get flu with the lethality of a bird flu but with the ability to travel from human to human.

In 1997, people in Hong Kong got the flu from domestic birds that in turn

BIRD FLU: THE WORLD'S

American Social Commentator, Urban Theorist and Sociog

got it through wild birds. In 2005 you had the first example of a case in Thailand, where a woman got the flu directly from her dying young daughter. There are several other [unconfirmed] examples of human-to-human transmission. It's believed that this flu, once it acquires the ability to spread to the population, will infect somewhere between 25% and 50% of the human race. And, of course, in its present form it's killing 50% of the people who catch it.

Assuming that bird flu infected half of the human race with a 25% mortality rate, you're saying that, worldwide, one-quarter of the human race will die?

Yes. That's the worst-case scenario. It's possible that once the flu mutates and acquires the ability to pass easily from human to human, it may be less lethal. The 1918 flu managed to kill 1% of the human race while killing only 5% of the people who got it. Now, if you infect 25% to 50% of the human population of over 6 billion people, and then you kill 5% of that number, you're still talking about a disease that's capable of easily killing far more people than even AIDS/HIV has in 20 years.

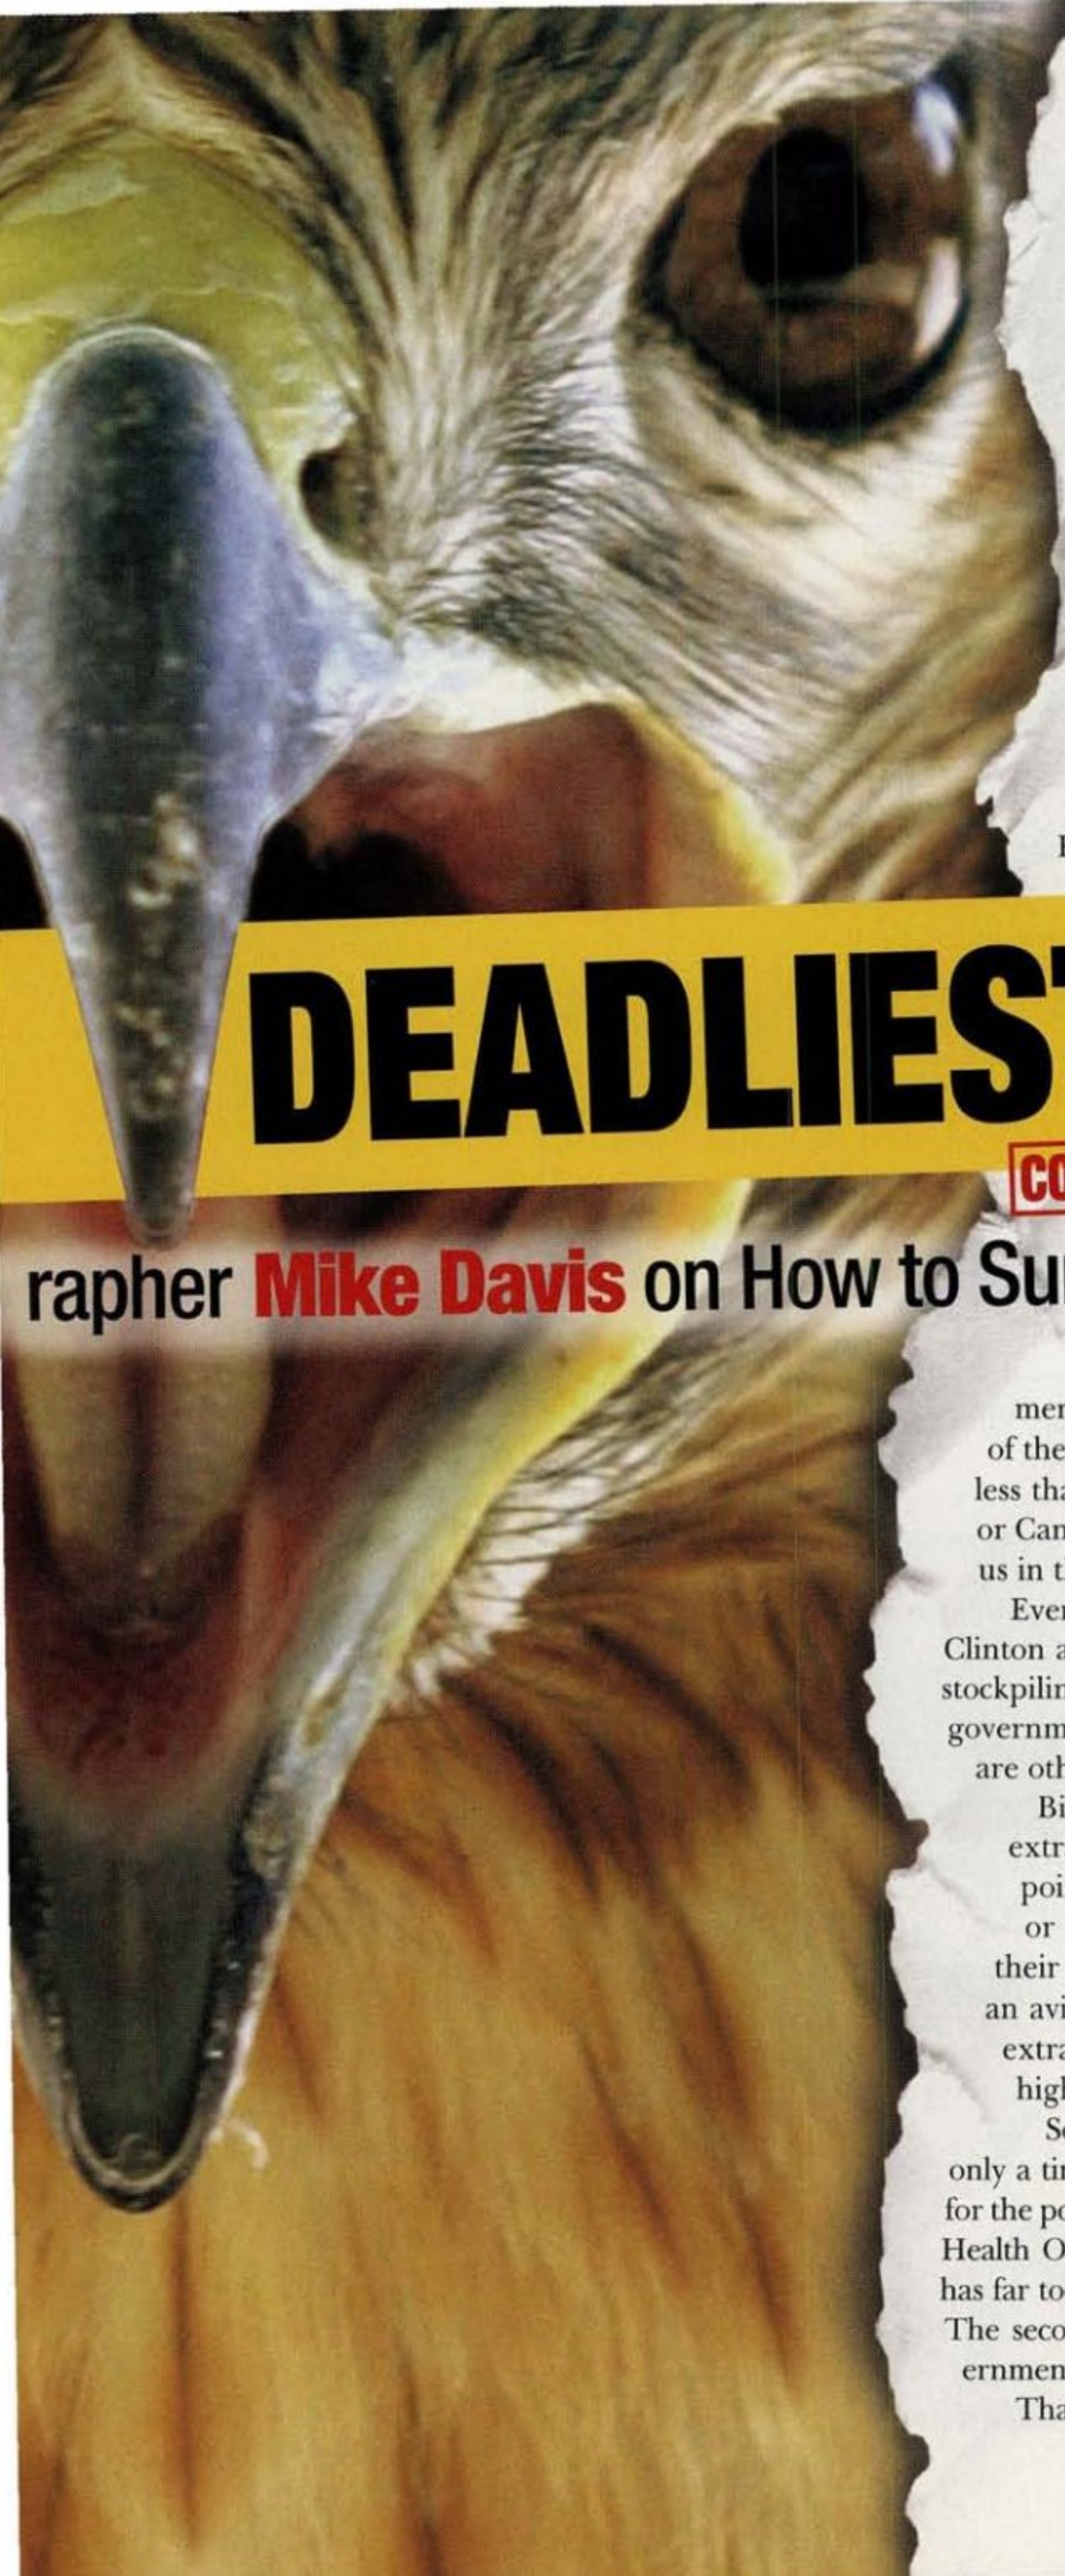

Right now the Blair government in England, which has taken this far more seriously than the administration in Washington, is searching the country for mass mortuary sites. The British essentially expect that as many as 700,000 Britons could die from avian flu. In the United States we're talking about as many as 2.5 million people. And those aren't the worst-case scenarios.

You're saying a pandemic is inevitable, but its deadliness is unclear?

The U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services, Mike Leavitt, told the Associated Press that it's an absolute certainty. The World Health Organization calls such a pandemic inevitable. The WHO's director for Asia and the Western Pacific told a meeting in Kuala Lumpur [Malaysia] that he thought we were at the tipping point right now, meaning that this fall or early winter is an extremely dangerous period. [Editor's Note: This interview was conducted in September '05.]

But even if we are lucky and survive the threat for another season, it's virtually inevitable that a pandemic will grow out of the current avian flu epidemic.

What's being done by the United States government to prepare for this?

Since the first outbreak in 1997 the world's leading researchers, the World Health Organization and government agencies have been sounding the alarm and urging the American government to create an adequate stockpile of the one category of antivirals that's proven to be effective against avian flu. There are two pharmaceuticals. One is a spray that is awkward to use and hasn't been [seriously] considered. The other is a pharmaceutical manufactured by Roche at a plant in Switzerland, marketed under the name Tamiflu.

If you've been exposed to the flu, and you take it, it prevents the flu from occurring. But it is very expensive, and it's made in a single plant. Right now there's a huge line of countries with orders for it. The World Health Organization and the manufacturer itself recommend that you stockpile enough of this medicine to cover 25% of the population. The U.S. has purchased enough to cover far less than 1% of the population, a fraction of what Great Britain or Canada has purchased. Those two countries are well ahead of us in their preparation to deal with avian flu.

Even the Government Accountability Office has criticized the Clinton and Bush administrations for not being more aggressive in stockpiling it. Finally this year [2005], under rising pressure, the government has agreed to buy more of it. The problem is, there are other people in line ahead of us.

Bill Frist, the Republican Senate Majority Leader, in an extraordinary speech at Harvard a couple of months ago pointed out that we're going to be waiting in line for a year or more while other countries stockpiled enough to save their populations. And he painted a very grim picture of what an avian flu epidemic could do to the United States. It was an extraordinary criticism of the administration by one of the highest-ranking Republicans.

So that's the situation with Tamiflu. Yes, it works, but there's only a tiny amount of it allocated to the American population, and for the poor countries there's simply almost none available. The World Health Organization is desperately trying to stockpile Tamiflu, but has far too little to stop a pandemic once it breaks out.

The second thing that everyone has urged the United States government to do is accelerate the development of an avian flu vaccine.

That means switching from what is now a 60-year-old technol-

A vendor slaughters chickens at a market in Nanjing, China. The latest bird flu threat first surfaced in 1997, infecting 18 Hong Kong residents and killing six.

ogy of vaccine production, which depends on using fertile chicken eggs. There's a limited supply of those eggs, and contamination can occur in its production. That's what happened in 2005 when we lost half the flu vaccine. There are modern technologies that would allow you to produce vaccine in much greater quantities. That transition hasn't occurred.

Do we even have an effective vaccine?

The Health and Human Services Department announced that it successfully tested a vaccine, which is being developed by another pharmaceutical company, Sanofi Pasteur. The government, because it has been under fire about this, boasted about the success of the test. What they didn't explain is although this vaccine did produce an immune reaction from the volunteers in three universities where it was tested, it required unusually large doses. The U.S. government has about 2 million doses of this vaccine, expecting it would cover 2 million people. But the dosage that was required to be effective means that only 450,000 people, in the best-case scenario, would be protected.

If instead of making an annual flu vaccine for the next year [which experts claim will not provide immunity for the current bird flu strain], you devoted all your efforts to making as much of this new vaccine as possible, it would still cover only about 2% of the population. On a world scale it's an almost meaningless amount.

Besides, the fundamental problem is that if a pandemic occurs, it will occur because the existing strain of avian flu has mutated. It will have different properties, and people hope that the prototype vaccine will work against it, but that's not an absolute certainty.

Who will get the limited supply of this vaccine?

There was actually a conference earlier in the year where experts from across the country—not just flu experts, but public health officials and medical experts—said, “Okay, if you only have a couple of million doses of the antiviral and a couple of million doses of the vaccine, who gets it?” They couldn't reach any consensus at all. Do you give it to old people in rest homes? Do you give it only to front-line medical workers? Do you protect the nation's leadership? On top of it, the Pentagon issued a memo saying it had priority claim, that the doses should first of all go to safeguarding American forces in the field. That remains unresolved. The government has not figured out yet who will get that, but almost certainly it will not be you or me or the person in the street.

Why did the U.S. government fail to prepare?

If the Bush Administration has acted in a lackadaisical way and now finds itself far behind other countries in defending the population, the Democrats have also paid little attention to this issue. In the last election the only person who consistently raised the threat of pandemic influenza was Ralph Nader. John Kerry didn't. I think it's another indication of where the political system has broken down and has been unable to safeguard the public interest.

But what makes this situation in the United States all the weirder is that the Bush Administration

A microbiologist in Bangkok, Thailand, examines a potentially deadly turtledove.

"The bottom line is that the [U.S.] government failed to deal with this as aggressively as other governments and has stockpiled far too little antivirals in a situation where now the supply can't be increased fast enough."

has paid enormous attention to infectious disease. Since 9/11 it has been obsessed with bioterrorism. The administration has spent billions of dollars developing vaccines to deal with threats of anthrax and smallpox that are largely hypothetical. Yet it failed to adequately prepare for the one bioterrorist threat, avian flu, that is imminent and which all authorities agree is probably the greatest danger to the human race since the emergence of AIDS/HIV.

Is it fair to say that money which should have gone to an influenza vaccine was diverted to counterterrorism?

Yes. When the idea of spending a lot of money on bioterrorism was proposed by the administration after 9/11, a lot of public health advocates signed on whether they believed in the threat or not, because they thought this would trickle down to diseases like tuberculosis and avian flu prevention. It hasn't. Some months back, hundreds of doctors led by Nobel Prize winners tried to petition Health and Human Services, protesting that this obsession with bioterrorism is stripping resources away from urgent research into other diseases—above all, avian flu.

Is there nothing we can do to catch up?

We've had the luxury of years to prepare for this, and now we may have run out of time. Dr.

Michael Osterholm is one of the world's leading authorities on pandemic flu. He's with the Center for Infectious Disease, Research and Policy at the University of Minnesota. Osterholm has been trying to get the government to accelerate its program for years. In a piece on his Web site he declared: "People just don't get it. If we were to begin a Manhattan Project-type response tonight, expanding drug production, we would not have a measurable impact on the availability of these critical products to sufficiently address a worldwide pandemic for at least a couple of years."

What can we, as individuals, do?

Limit public assembly. Kids should not go to school if it becomes bad enough. Most adults should not go to work. What antivirals and vaccines existed—after they went to congressmen and the Pentagon—would make their way to emergency officials.

The safest thing you can do is to avoid other people. Flu spreads by sneezing and coughing. It would probably be recommended to wear a face mask. Washing your hands is the most effective thing you can do with any disease that's spread in an aerosol way. In other words, people will be asked to do the same things they did in 1918. This will save lives, but it will not stop the pandemic.

What happens after this crisis passes?

This is not a one-shot or unique crisis. This is the shape of things to come. AIDS/HIV should have warned us that globalization is now producing its biological, or microbiological, response. The problem is that you have economic globalization, but you haven't created a global public health infrastructure. You haven't created the global means to deal with diseases that can merge in one corner of the Earth and then travel to the rest of the planet, literally, within hours. 🌐

While bird flu has the whole world in panic mode, one person is happy as chicken potpie about the impending pandemic: Donald Rumsfeld. Before being named America's Defense Secretary, he served as chairman of Gilead Sciences Inc., the biotech company that owns the rights to Tamiflu, the influenza vaccine that is now the most sought-after drug in existence. According to Fortune magazine, Rumsfeld still holds millions of shares of Gilead stock. As of November '05, the share price was bobbing around the $50 mark, up from $35 in just seven months. That would mean a monumental windfall for Rumsfeld, already one of the richest members of Bush's Cabinet.

Kim Cattrall's career hit a new peak when she starred in the HBO series Sex and the City. Here she is revealing one of her twin peaks in New York City. The ripe beauty let her well-aged areola greet the adoring public at a fund-raiser. Even if the boob tube actress didn't raise any dough, this nip-slip raises our temperatures.

Basic Instinct star Sharon Stone has never been shy about showing off her various talents. Whether it's airing out her healthy beaver on screen or frolicking topless in a tropical locale, the fortysomething divorcée knows how to get our attention. Here at a press junket for that crappy Catwoman movie, she lets her true feelings be known through her expressive and well-matured mammaries. Stone is what we call an OMSWSLTF—an old movie star we'd still love to fuck.

We always knew Ice T's pimp hand was strong—but damn! Here's his main bitch, wife Coco, at the MTV awards in Miami. You may remember Coco, a/k/a Nicole Austin, from the cover of Ice's Power LP. No? Doesn't matter. With a body like this, you know the rapper-turned-actor has no problem "keepin' it real." Much respect, T—nice pull.

HOW TO LIVE FOREVER

Futurist Max More, Ph.D., explains why immortality may be within your grasp.

Technology is starting to catch up with our desire to conquer death. Until recently the most that people could hope for was to avoid the worst disorders of old age. Now technology's accelerating advances have stirred up bolder goals: to rejuvenate the body and brain and blast past the maximum human life span of 122 years (a record set by Jeanne Calment in 1997). But can we expect more than 140 or 150 years? And will we enjoy those extra decades with vitality? For the majority of those alive in America today, the answers are yes and yes. Economic and technological logic make superlongevity practically inevitable.

Immortality for mere mortals consists of living just long enough to survive a little longer. We will achieve immortality not in one great leap, but in baby steps. What we need to do is stay alive to ride the wave of accelerating longevity. Life expectancy keeps growing and should do so at an ever-faster pace. We will live indefinitely once biomedical advances extend our lives by at least one year each year. At that point we will have reached longevity escape velocity (LEV).

Biogerontologist Aubrey de Grey estimates attaining LEV in 15 to 100 years, with 25 years as his best guess. To move the odds in his favor, de Grey instituted the Methuselah Mouse Prize. This may have the same effect on achieving LEV as the Ansari X-Prize had on the more familiar kind of escape velocity involving private space launches.

The Methuselah Mouse Prize (or Mprize) was first suggested by Gregory Stock and later implemented by Aubrey de Grey and Dave Gobel. Candidates are anti-aging researchers seeking healthy life extension in mice, and the Mprize is intended to accelerate the discovery of aging interventions by providing a financial incentive. The prize money is awarded to the producer of the world's longest-living mouse. The Methuselah Mouse Foundation has two competitions: a Longevity Prize for the oldest-ever Mus musculus (lab mouse) and a Rejuvenation Prize for the best-ever late-onset intervention. [See MPrize.org or MethuselahFoundation.org.]

Three crucial factors underlie the driving forces rushing us closer to forever. Most fundamental is the stunning and unceasing success of the scientific method—the process that started around 400 years ago. The close connection between science and technology enables the second factor: instruments that see farther, deeper and more precisely. Quantum dot nanocrystals (QDCs), for example, could replace organic dyes, yielding far greater sensitivity. Researchers have used another manufactured molecule, known as mag-netodendrimers, to track stem cells as they make new tissue after being implanted in the brains of rats.

More recently we've seen a third factor boost the power of the scientific method: At research organizations around the world, intellectual isolation is now out, and cross-fertilization is in. Information technology and biotechnology have been intersecting and converging, creating new capabilities in such areas as genomics and drug design. The rocket fuel of information technology—smaller, faster, cheaper, ubiquitous—now hastens biological discovery through bioinformatics, genomic analysis, in silico biology and other applications.

Here's the strategy for achieving LEV: Be one of the first to use each new advance in biomedical technology. That will maximize your odds of taking each consecutive step. Remember William Gibson's proclamation that "the future has already arrived; it just isn't evenly distributed yet." Every advance could be the one that saves your life. If you're still taking generic multivitamins, for example, you're missing out on designer vitamins optimized for your unique biochemistry. You can have personalized supplements formulated based on the results of genomic tests and biomarker tests that measure numerous indicators of aging, from levels of IGF-1 (essential for building and maintaining muscle) to bone density and levels of very small lipoproteins in your blood (the ones that work hardest to kill you).

Your personal physician may be willing to check out some of these biomarkers. But for a really comprehensive battery of tests designed specifically for anti-aging purposes, you would do much better to check out the Kronos Clinic, based in Phoenix, Arizona. [See KronosCentre.com.]

Avoid the biggest killers—heart disease, cancer and stroke—by augmenting quality nutrition and regular exercise with technologies available now. If you're over 40 or have genetic risks, get yourself into an advanced scanning clinic. The best clinics use technologies that pick up cancer clusters no bigger than the head of a pin. Get a blood test to measure DR-70, a tumor marker that reveals 13 kinds of cancer. Other promising options: a CT virtual colonoscopy and genomic tests to learn which risky behaviors you especially need to avoid. Currently you can get tests for only a few genetic markers, including BRCA1 (breast and ovarian cancer) and GSTM1 (a protective enzyme), but DNA-chip technology is moving fast.

If a wonky heart threatens your survival, you can have a Medtronic Internet-enabled pacemaker implanted. This not only monitors your cardiac function, but also relays the information to a physician in real time, instead of having to wait for your next checkup. If you're serious about slashing your cardiac risks, get yourself checked for levels of plaque and inflammation, as well as blood levels of advanced indicators such as Lp(a), homocysteine, CRP and the five subtypes of HDL and seven of LDL. Get a CT Heart Scan with calcium store, or undergo EBT scanning. Consider taking the supplements policosanol, phosphatidylserine and gugulipid [available at health food stores], or new drugs like AGI-1067 and Pactimibe. Before long, a sign of good health will include the complete absence of a heartbeat. Implanted devices will provide a continuous infusion, making the old biological pump obsolete.

Are your senses getting dull? Cochlear and corneal implants that restore lost sensory functions are already here and will improve rapidly. Other prostheses available to you now, or very soon, include vestibular prosthetics to replace lost balance and neurostimulators (brain pacemakers) to prevent seizures and alleviate depression.

Surviving into the infinite future with a healthy body will be pointless if your brain has decayed. The health of your brain can be boosted if you add cognitive enhancers and nootropics ("smart drugs") to your supplements. Substances such as vinpocetine, acetyl-L-carnitine, pregnenolone [all available at health food stores], Donazepil (Aricept), Provigil [both by prescription only, the latter may be ordered from Europe] and phosphatidylserine can sharpen concentration, enhance memory and slow brain aging. We can even see what's going on in our three-pound (continued on page 62)

CASSIE COURTLAND AS
"JULIE" & RANDY SPEARS
AS "THE PRODUCER" IN

PAY TO

When Julie steps off the bus with a headful of dreams, the small-town girl knows she's going to make it in show business no matter what. The only problem is, she doesn't know a soul in Hollywood and is flat broke. Lucky for Julie, she's approached by a dapper stranger who asks, "Are you an actress?" The eager beaver quickly replies, "I want to be." The man then pulls out his wallet and hands her a business card. On it is printed just one word in block letters: PRODUCER.

PLAY

PHOTOGRAPHY BY LAURENT SKY

Julie accepts an invitation to the fellow's apartment. After all, it sure beats sleeping in the bus station. Once inside his gaudy bachelor pad, the slimy dude quickly orders the babe to undress. "Honey," he crones, "if you want your career to take off, you gotta take off your clothes!"

The Producer auditions the wannabe starlet long into the night. Fucking her hard, he can see that the chick is flexible and has a lot of potential. "Now can you put me in films?" questions the breathy broad during a lull in the torrid action.

"Just as long as you pay your dues," grunts the greaseball as he drives his throbbing cock into the hottie's hungry mouth.

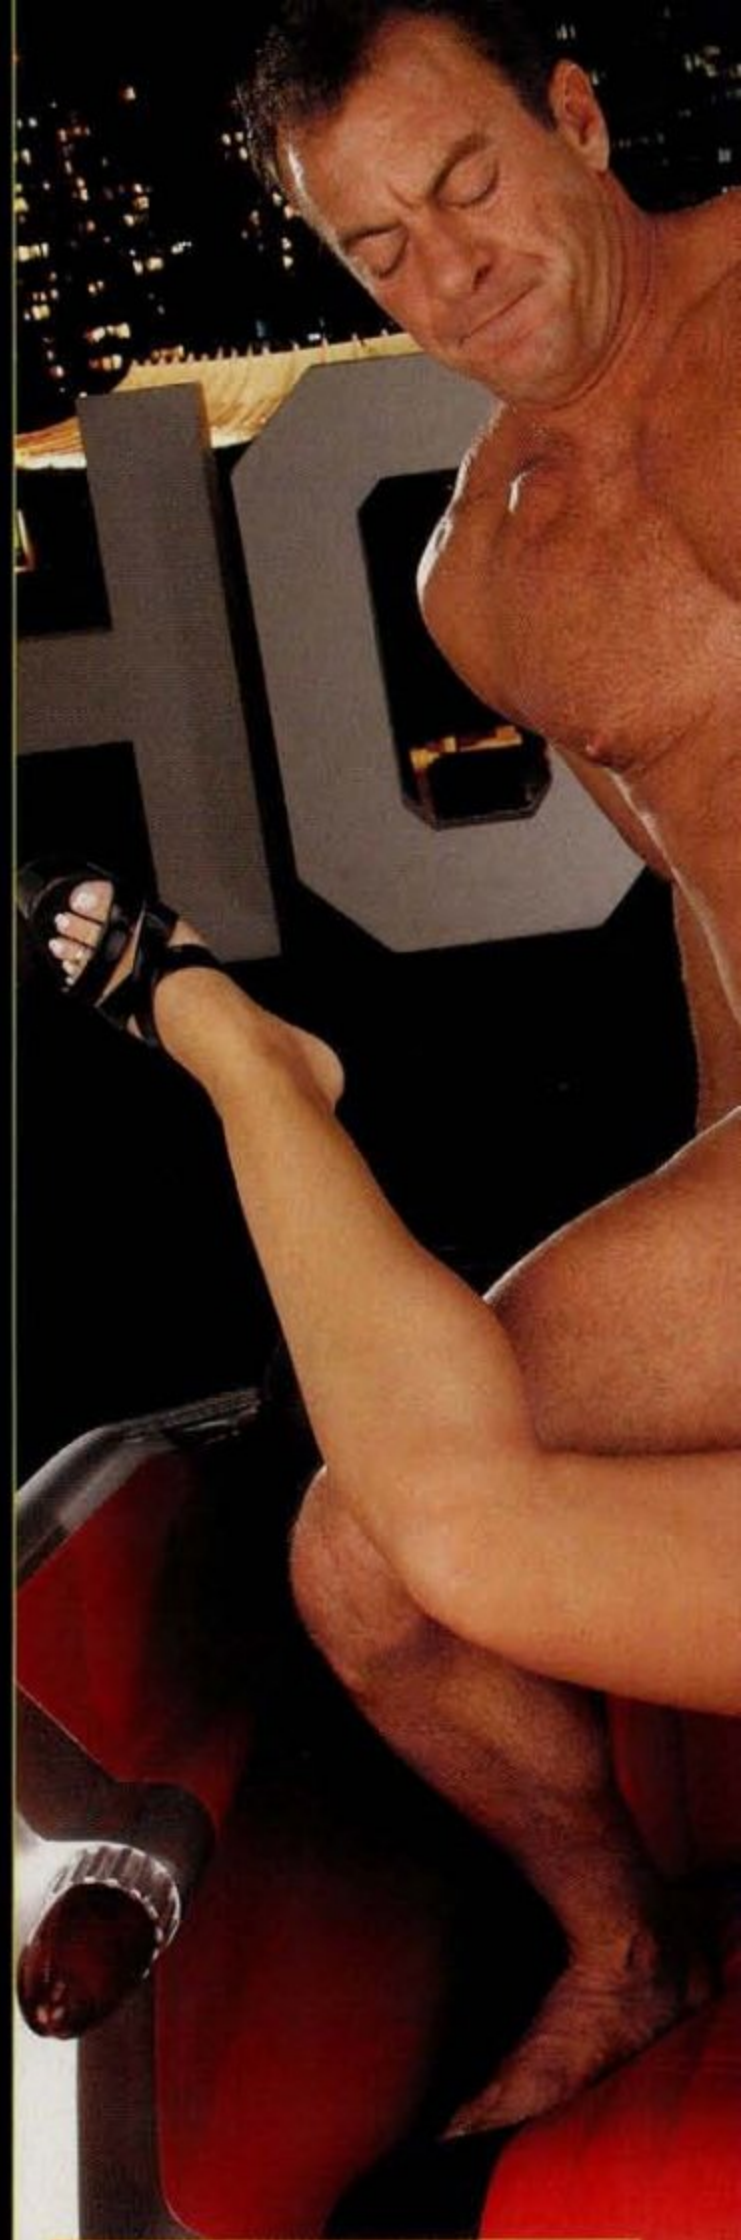

Even before it's over, Julie is convinced she's on her way to stardom. The Producer hopes the bubble-headed blonde doesn't find out that he works with vegetables in a supermarket and that he'd just added an R to his business card.

REVOLVER

Bang a Gun, Get It On

After surviving some of the most influential rock groups of our generation, the members of Velvet Revolver have proved that there's life after the big 4-0. Leaving behind their hard-core twentysomething days in Guns N' Roses, The Cult and Stone Temple Pilots, they've reinvented themselves into the hottest rock 'n' roll band on the planet.

Entertainment Editor Tom Farrell caught up with guitarist Slash and drummer Matt Sorum to reminisce about the musicians' Caligula lifestyles of yesteryear, their drug quests in the deep jungles of Venezuela and why Slash loves HUSTLER big-time.

HUSTLER: When I first interviewed you in 1987, I asked you where you thought you'd be in ten years. Do you remember your answer?

SLASH: (Laughs.) Well, I can pretty much guess. It was "Dead," right? Yup.

(Laughs.) Well. (Pauses.) Sorry!

It's a good thing you were wrong.

Yeah, it's the whole "I hope I die before I get old" bit. I'm sure I meant it. I mean, I really thought I'd be dead within ten years.

Lots of people thought that. Guns N' Roses was living the hard rock 'n' roll lifestyle. I remember you mentioned how you'd save your crabs and put them in jars and watch them fight.

(Laughs.) Oh, man. Yeah, I think I remember that. Wow! There are so many stories from back in the day. People will come up to me saying, "Yeah, I heard about the time you did this and that. Is that true? Did that really happen?" And I just let them believe what they want to believe. But you know how I told you I'd probably be dead in ten years? It held true for where I was at then. There was a lot of stuff, but that's in the past.

I have to ask you about the possibility of a Guns N' Roses reunion with the original members.

Yeah, I guess you have to ask. To be honest, it's not even something I give a thought to. I'm happy where I am and where I'm going. A GNR reunion would be a problem on a lot of levels, but it's not something I ever think of.

The music industry has changed a lot since Guns N' Roses was signed in the late 1980s. All the labels are converging under large parent companies.

(Sighs.) There used to be all these different labels, and now they're conglomerates, downsized and reformed. What worries me are the bean counters, the bottom-line guys in corporations who own the labels who only care about whether or not you've turned a profit. But I sometimes wonder how much it has changed things. There was crap on the radio ten years ago, 20 years ago, 30 years ago. And there's crap today, but is that because of the corporate downsizing and label mergers? With more people watching the bottom line, it seems that bands are worrying about having to sell and be commercial in order to get signed. That worries me. But there're a lot of indies picking up the slack and putting out good music and new bands. I think we're going to see a new industry emerge, and when it happens, there's going to be some huge changes in the way the music industry does business.

Interview by Entertainment Editor Tom Farrell

I love the shots of you in the HUSTLER T-shirt.

I've always liked HUSTLER, ever since I could remember. I'd stop by the HUSTLER offices back when RIP [a popular Larry Flynt-owned rock music publication in the late '80s and early '90s] was around. You guys were always good to me. And my wife is an ex-HUSTLER model, so I feel like I'm part of the HUSTLER family. And it had to be HUSTLER. It was the only one. It couldn't be Playboy or even Penthouse for that matter. It had to be HUSTLER, because of its edge. I love the association.

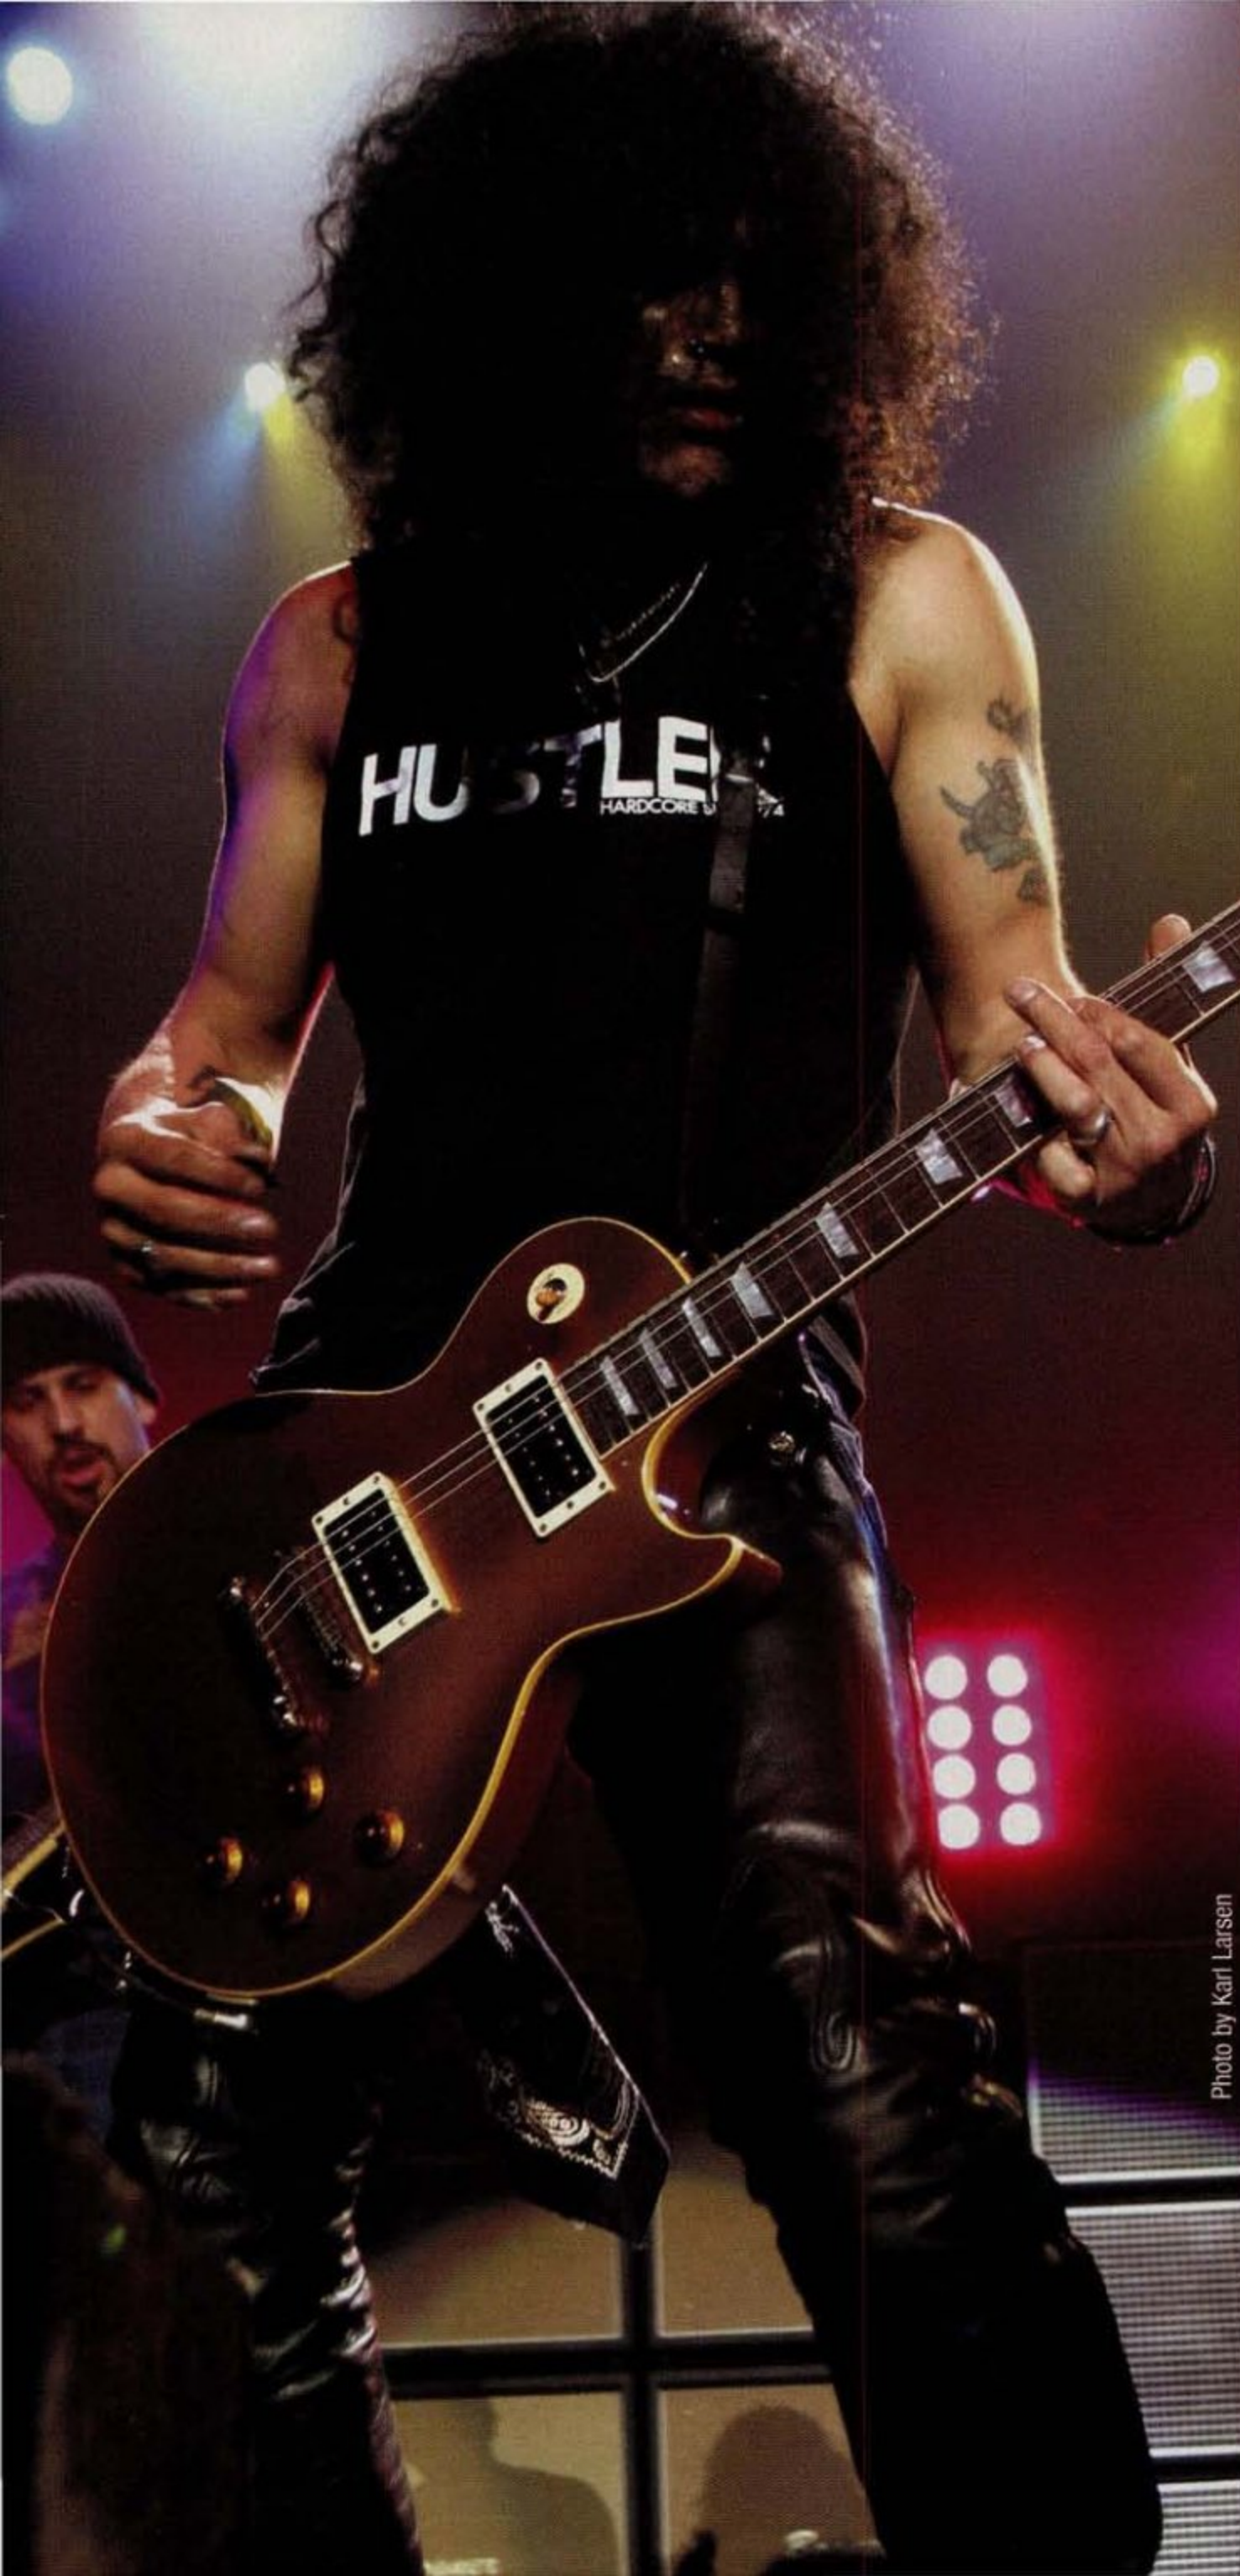

Matt Sorum

After all the years of playing with Tori Amos, The Cult, Guns N' Roses and now Velvet Revolver, how's the rock 'n' roll lifestyle treating you?

MATT SORUM: The drinking and the drugs and the women and everything was just sort of keeping that adrenaline gland open, a continuation of this feeling that you had onstage. And it was that basic idea, old-school, traditional: sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll. I was living it constantly, 24 hours per day. Now I'll go down to the gym. I'll have a few drinks after the show and have a good time. Maybe back in the day, it was sort of wanting validation in an egocentric rock star sort of way. I had three girls backstage last night. I didn't fuck them. But it was nice having them around. So it's not like the days of GNR when we used to have complete Caligula-type activity going on.

When I interviewed Slash right after GNR was signed, he said that they used to collect their crabs, put them in jars and watch them fight.

Oh, my God! (Laughs.) I know that Steven Adler [GNR's original drummer] infected the bus once with crabs.

They had to burn every mattress from here to Pasadena. Those were the days when GNR were sleeping in porn store booths because they were so poor.

Oh, yeah. When Duff McKagan was in my bunk the other day by accident, I was okay with it because he's all good. But in the old days I'd be like, "I ain't going in there." (Laughs.)

With all the bands you've played with, you must have a couple of really memorable road stories.

My drug adventures. I've had so many. One time I got in a cab in Caracas, Venezuela, and said to the driver, "Co-caine." And he said, "Si, cuanto?" I couldn't figure out my numbers in Spanish right away, so I just said, "Diez [ten]." And he said, "Ándele," and we drove off. So I'm in this cab. We go off the highway, and we're on this dirt road going through the jungle in Venezuela. And I mean there's nothing but jungle and this dirt road. And I hear monkeys and jungle sounds. We drive for 20 minutes on this crazy dirt road, and I'm like, "Amigo, where we going, man?" So finally we pull up in front of a shack made out of tin and sheets of plywood, and he blinks his lights ten times. I gave him the money, which was equivalent to $70. A guy came out and threw ten grams in straws. Then the guy handed me two bottles of pure Venezuelan rum in brown bottles with no labels. So there I was. He took one. He said, "For me, amigo." I said, "Si. Okay." He did the whole thing in like one blast, and I was just like, "Oh, my God!" Anyway, two days later the tour manager found me on the balcony of my hotel with the bottles of rum and all these empty straws and said, "We have a show, Matt!" And I said, "Oh, no!" He put me in the shower and then put my clothes on, got me up and pushed me onstage. And I remember saying, "Duff, I'm not well. How am I playing?" He said, "You're great." Then I looked at Duff, and he was even more fucked up than I was.

You hit the road at an early age, even before you drummed for Y Kant Tori Read. What was your first road experience like?

I did my first real tour in a van and station wagon, played all through the South. I remember my first groupie. I was in Baton Rouge. We were flopping on people's couches and stuff, and I woke up to this girl standing over me. She said, "Hello, darling! You ever been to the South? My name's Jessica." She was naked. For me, that really sealed what I was planning on doing with my life.

Who are some of your favorite new bands?

I like that band Mars Volta; they've got some cool stuff. Muse. I like Queens of the Stone Age. I wouldn't call them a new band, but they've got a new sound. I got into that whole Jet, Strokes trip for a minute, but I just don't know if those guys are going to be able to keep it up. I'm friends with the Strokes, and I like what they did for music. It's kind of like what Nirvana did to 1980s metal. Turned it back a little.

If you could pick one band to be in, what would it be?

I'd love to play with Queens of the Stone Age. I like what they do. Muse is cool because it's kind of progressive, and I came from a very progressive background.

They've got that Queen meets Radiohead thing going.

Yeah, they're great musicians too. I hate going to see a band where they sound great on a record, but they've been chopped up in a computer, and they can't fucking play live.

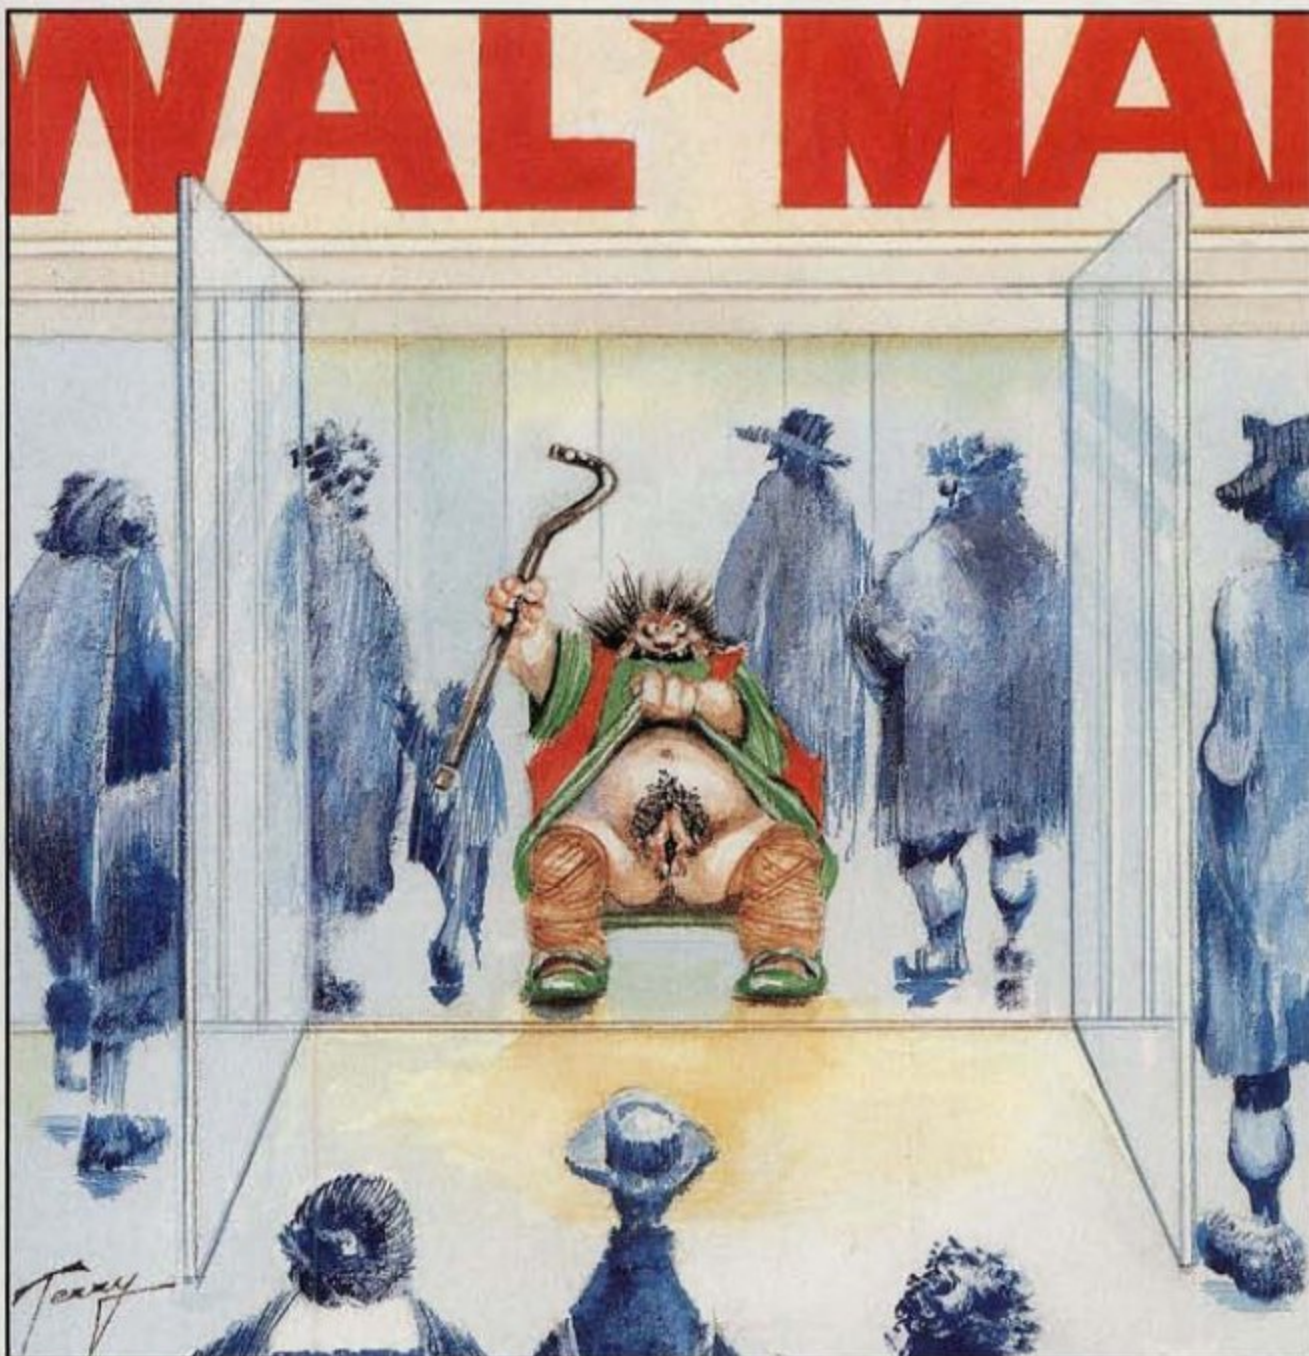

Any words for Velvet Revolver fans?

Yeah, just come to the show. If you like the album, come see the show. You will totally get it when you come to the show.

Anything else?

Say hello to Larry Flynt. I went to his house years ago. 🐼

MONEY HONEYYS

To find out the going rate for regular girls to go wild, we waved a fistful of greenbacks around some popular nightspots in America's cereal capital—Battle Creek, Michigan. In this invigorating exposé, HUSTLER examines what a few crisp bucks and a little coaxing can buy these days.

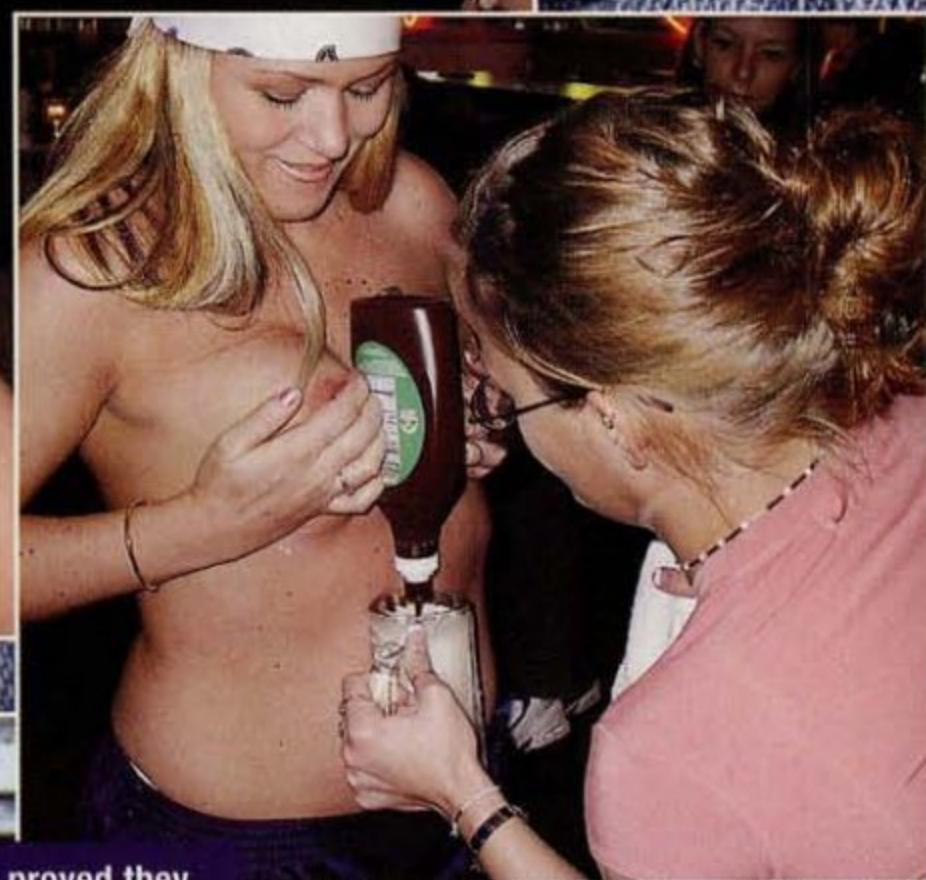

We pulled out a 5-spot, but it finally took $20 before Candy dropped trou and wedged a beer bottle between her cheeks. Kasey didn't need to be bribed, however, since a free brewski made this golden shower well worthwhile.

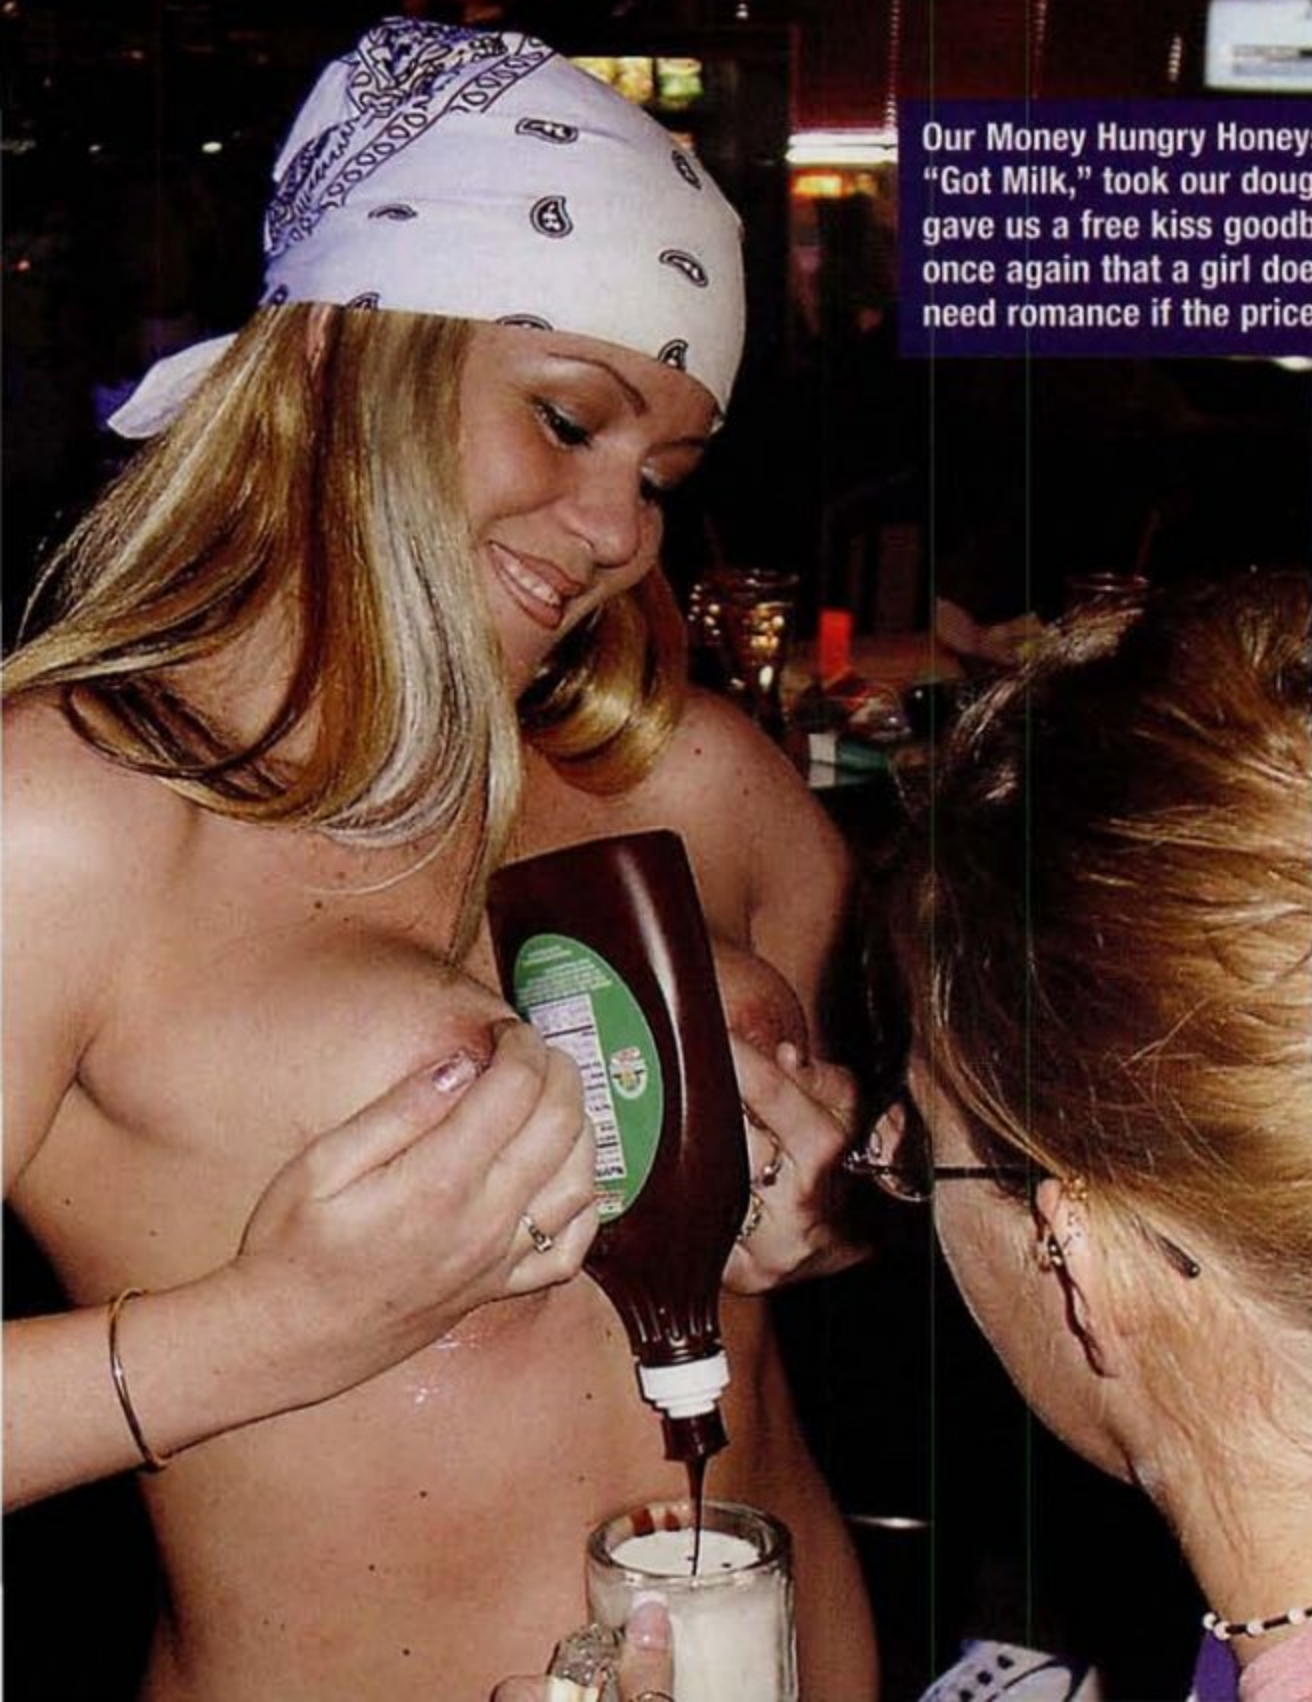

We offered 20 bucks to see Kasey topless and "get milked," but the blonde said she'd only do it in her bra for 30. Raising the ante, we were willing to pay 40 smackers, take it or leave it, and out came Kasey's casabas for our hardworking lensman.

Our Money Hungry Honeys proved they "Got Milk," took our dough and even gave us a free kiss goodbye, reaffirming once again that a girl doesn't always need romance if the price is right.

"A bipartisan commission has been assembled to determine why the Bush Administration can no longer do whatever the fuck it wants and get away with it."

You may soon become invulnerable to disease. Biomedical technologies already on the horizon will monitor, detect and repair every pathogen imaginable. When bioscientists decoded the genome of the SARS virus in just six days, we saw another sign of scientific acceleration. We will figure out biochemical pathways, disease processes and repair possibilities using emerging technologies like NEMS (nanoelectromechanical systems), RNA and DNA chips, and computer modeling of entire organs (such as the Physiome Project). Within a few years you will be able to have your personal genome and proteome sequenced.

If you discover any problems, you will choose from an army of devices to fix them. Drugs of the past will be replaced by intelligent drug delivery mechanisms, like the one centimeter square MicroCHIPS device, which will eventually combine the functions of precise drug release, response sensing and data transmission. Organogenesis—the regeneration or replacement of organs—is already replacing blood vessels and fabricating new ones out of fibroblast cells. Microscopic machines called angiochips will transport fabricated cells (cultivars) to the heart for repair. Neuroprostheses will restore lost or damaged brain function.

We will have achieved longevity escape velocity once we go beyond fixing problems to thorough prevention and augmentation. Achieving something close to invulnerability will require nanobiotechnology (or nanomedicine). Nano devices will clean out toxins from every cell in our bodies, backed up by chromosome replacement therapy to fix up genetic damage sustained over our years of living. Cellular repair devices will rebuild structural damage, while related nanodevices will augment our immune system, strengthen our bones by lacing them with diamond and build direct neural-computer interfaces that expand our senses, preserve our memories and enhance our intellects. Respirocytes will vastly expand your body's oxygen-carrying capacity, allowing you to sprint or swim for an hour without taking a breath.

If you have reached an uncomfortably advanced age, consider making arrangements for cryonic suspension. By being placed in biostasis at the point of clinical death, then held at an ultralow temperature until medical technology advances, you may be able to die and yet still live forever. If you are still in the first half of your expected life span, you may have a good chance of living a truly long life. Stick with the program as it unfolds, realizing that history is a poor guide in the face of accelerating change. Visionary inventor Ray Kurzweil calculates that we will see as much progress in this century as would take place in 20,000 years at yesterday's rate of progress. Even if he is off the mark by a factor of a hundred, we can be sure of enormous advances coming at us ever more frequently. Our mastery over biology will keep expanding until, finally, we can say that death doesn't live here anymore.

Special thanks to Buff Monster (BuffMonster.com) for assisting on this layout.

Angie, the beautiful blonde, invites Veronica to come over to her place, an abandoned warehouse, to take this collaboration even further. There, the black-haired vixen looks around and chirps, "I love your space."

"Thanks," coos Angie. "I'm lucky to have this loft."

Veronica laughs. "I wasn't talking about the loft, sweetie!"

The sexy blonde darts her tongue in and out of Veronica's moist mound. Then she selects the perfect tool to turn her partner's cunt into a masturbation masterpiece.

After a long afternoon of sucking and fucking, the two amorous artists collapse into a satisfied heap on their posters. We may not know art, but we know what we like...and that's hot girl-on-girl action.

Carmen Electra EXPOSED!

EXPOSÉ BY KEITH VALCOURT

"USA EXCLUSIVE!"

Photos by Gilles Gagnon/eyevine/ZUMA Press

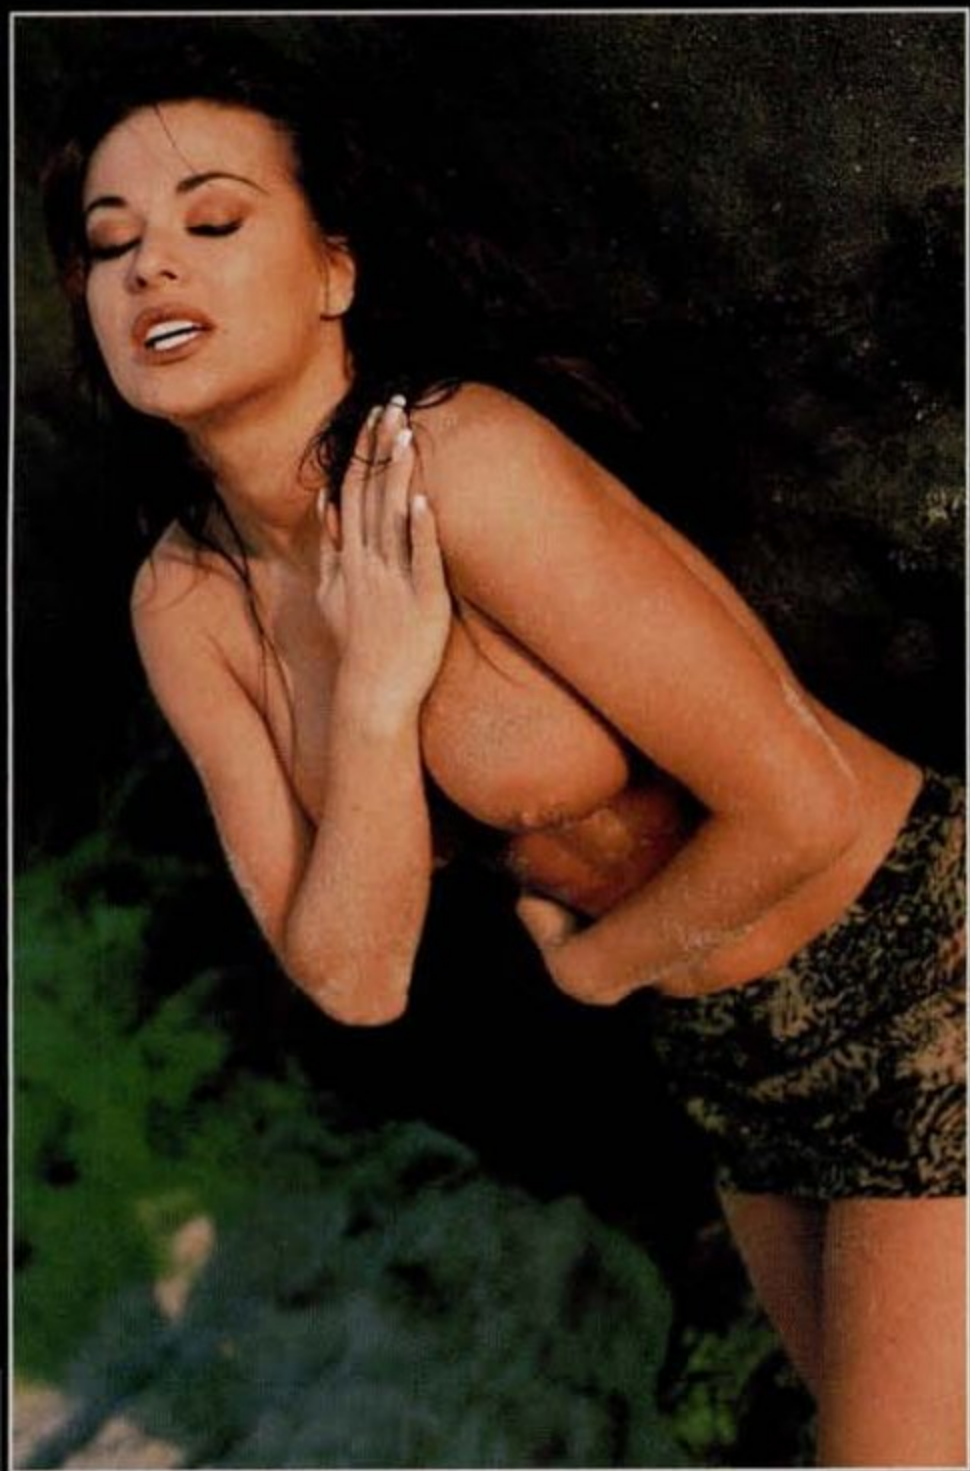

It's a showbiz rarity that a girl can go from exotic dancer to movie star and still keep her stripper name. Born Tara Leigh Patrick in White Oak, Ohio, in 1972, Carmen Electra was discovered by androgynous funkmaster Prince. First, she tried her hand as a singer/actress. She even released a self-titled CD on her mentor's Paisley Park label that featured the appropriate single "Go-Go Dancer." Sadly, no one cared. Then Carmen turned to her true calling—acting—and lit up the silver screen in the highly forgettable low-budget film An American Vampire Story. Again, no one cared.

It would take an orange swimsuit for the world to finally notice the stacked starlet. Cast as lusty lifeguard Lani McKenzie, Electra replaced Pamela Anderson on the hit TV show Baywatch, and the newcomer's bouncing beach balls made our Speedos that much tighter. Next, she starred in a series of dreadful movies, including Starsky & Hutch, Cheaper by the Dozen 2, My Boss's Daughter and 2005's Dirty Love with Jenny McCarthy.

POLARIZING THE WORKPLACE: THE P.C. HAZARD

Reporter Larry Wichman takes a look at political correctness and why management and the rank and file are both endangered.

In 1995, works by a local artist were exhibited in the rotunda of Murfreesboro, Tennessee's city hall. One painting depicted a partially naked female, prompting an assistant school superintendent to file a hostile-workplace suit because she found the piece "very offensive and degrading to me as a woman." The plaintiff also charged that it had been "thrust in my face on my way into a meeting with my superiors, most of whom are men."

The city attorney took the painting down and stashed it in his closet. "You really can't be too cautious," he told reporters. "A sexual-harassment judgment usually has six zeros behind it."

The senseless expansion of workplace-harassment law, as embodied by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, poses an increasingly serious threat to free speech in America. Due to risk aversion, such as that displayed by the Murfreesboro official, employers are being turned into thought police by the fear of lawsuits.

DUMBING DOWN THE WORKPLACE

Allen Dub, a Chicago attorney who represents management in labor relations, says employers have their feet to the fire. "It doesn't cost anything for an employee to file a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission," he explains, "but the EEOC—a federal agency—can level fines and/or allow a discrimination suit to proceed through the federal courts that can cost hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Noting how little it takes to spark one of these complaints, Dub points to a recent case he handled involving a client sued for religious discrimination by a Rastafarian. Dub explains there had been comments made about the man's dreadlocks and religious practices in the workplace out of curiosity, but that "it was not a persistent thing." When the worker mentioned being a Rasta to his supervisor, the latter allegedly asked, "You mean like Bob Marley?" And a complaint was filed.

In the past decade even the definition of workplace has expanded. Federal Express, for example, was sued by a courier for failing to act against a customer on her route who allegedly stared menacingly, demanded dates and said that she would look better with her clothes off. In 1994 the Kentucky Commission on Human Rights wrote to South Central Bell, explaining that the company's

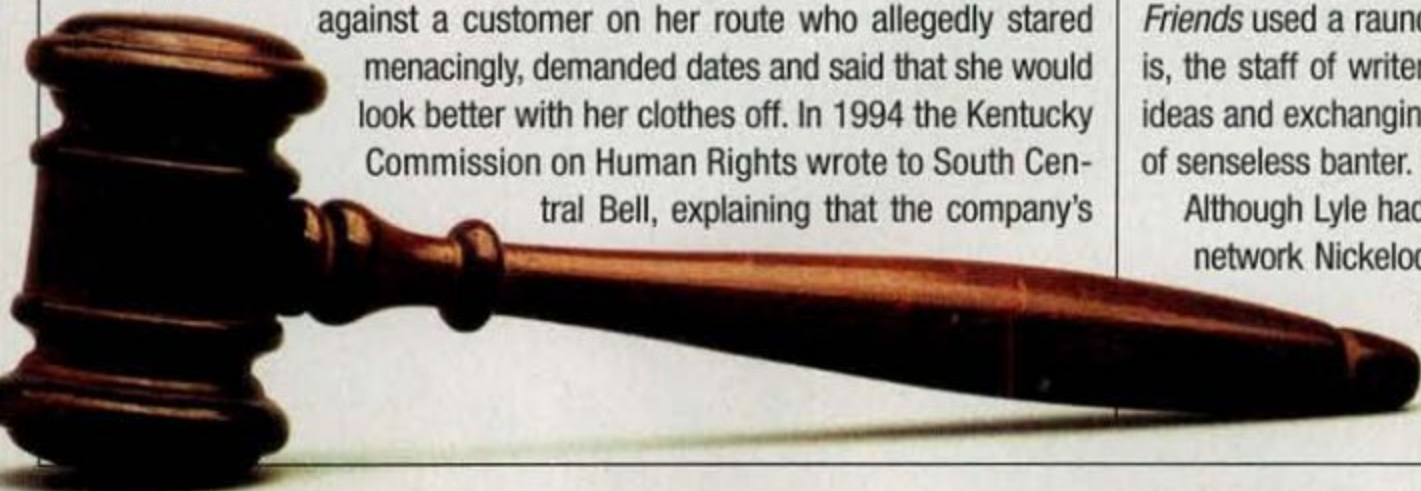

MEN WORKING signs were discriminatory. They were immediately removed.

Have laws designed to make the workplace comfortable turned it into a sterile environment where people are afraid to express sincere thoughts and emotions? Imagine the impact on the creative minds of Hollywood if former writer's assistant Amaani Lyle is successful in her suit against Warner Bros. According to civil libertarians, the case represents a collision of sexual-harassment law and the First Amendment's protection of free speech.

For four months in 1999, 26-year-old Lyle toiled as a secretary for the talented but bawdy writing staff of Friends. Like most network comedies, Friends used a raunchy, boiler room approach to generating material. That is, the staff of writers would sit together for days at a time, throwing out ideas and exchanging barbs, then harvesting what was usable from reams of senseless banter. It was Lyle's job to type this babble into a computer.

Although Lyle had previously worked in a writers' room at the children's network Nickelodeon, she was unprepared for the raw sexual remarks and adolescent humor that are often the norm among writers of an adult-oriented prime-time show. After Lyle was fired for allegedly being a poor typist, she filed a workplace-harassment suit against the show's producers.

Lyle's suit, which named Friends producers, Warner Bros. Television Productions and Bright Kauffman Crane Productions, as well as writers Adam Chase, Greg Malins and Andrew Reich, claimed gender and racial discrimination. "[The writers] would basically sit like teenagers in a locker room, talking about, you know ... things they wanted to do to the cast and walking around pretending to masturbate and just ridiculous conduct," Lyle stated in court documents.

The show's writers, in sworn depositions, admitted to telling explicit stories about kinky sexual encounters. They claimed they simulated masturbation as a gesture of wasting time, talked about anal sex and even altered an inspirational calendar by changing the word happiness to penis. But according to insiders, that's just part of the process in a writers' room—one Lyle was warned about when she'd been hired.

"The show deals with sex and sexual references and anatomical references," says Adam Levin, a lawyer for Warner Bros. and the writers and producers in its employ. "It is axiomatic that writers need to talk about sex, joke about sex and laugh about sex."

Lyle's lawsuit was dismissed by a Los Angeles County Superior Court judge only to be reinstated by L.A.'s Second District Court of Appeal. Los Angeles Times Communications LLC and the American Society of Newspaper Editors immediately fired off a friend-of-the-court brief, warning that finding in favor of the plaintiff would have a disastrous impact on newspaper editors and on the unrestricted sharing of information. The Writers Guild of America argued in its own brief that restrictions on the writing process would have negative repercussions on all forms of entertainment.

A negative legal precedent, it's feared, could make reporters and editors vulnerable to harassment claims when they discuss stories of a sexual nature. The same would hold true if they reported on one. Imagine your local evening news anchor walking off the set in mid-broadcast, upset at having to report on the Michael Jackson child-molestation trial. It is also conceivable that an editor could be sued for harassment when discussing whether a celebrity rape case should make page one.

According to First Amendment lawyer Douglas E. Mirell, such concerns are "not fanciful or hypothetical." Although admitting he has never heard of a sexual-harassment suit triggered by conversations in a newsroom, Mirell adds, "I also hadn't heard of anyone suing screenwriters over private conversations until this case."

How Do You Take It?

Geof Prysirr gives an insider's view of personal interaction undermined by P.C. extremism.

"I'll have a Diet Coke," said a passenger seated behind me.

"I'll take some cranberry juice, please," another ordered.

The flight attendant brought her service cart to a halt next to me, and I patiently waited for her to ask for my beverage preference. No Diet Coke or juice for me; it was more of a good, old-fashioned, wake-me-up-cup-of-Joe kind of morning. "What can I get for you, sir?" she asked.

"I'll have coffee, please."

"How do you take it?"

"Black."

She handed me my java, we exchanged thank you/you're welcome smiles, and away she rolled.

At this point you may be asking yourself, "Why am I reading this mundane slice of everyday life? Who cares?" I certainly didn't—until in mid-sip the woman sitting beside me leaned over and, with a nondescript smirk, said, "Excuse me. It's not considered appropriate to say black when ordering coffee. You might offend someone. You want to say plain, as in 'I'll take it plain.'"

I stared at this person for what felt like an inordinate amount of time and then burst out laughing. "Good one," I chuckled. The problem was, she wasn't laughing back.

In fact, these days very few of us are laughing at much of anything anymore. An insidious carelessness/fearfulness has crept its way into our everyday behavior that, passively, accuses each and every one of us of acting in an inappropriate, discriminatory and prejudicial manner. While this affliction continues to infect our personal lives, it is an epidemic in the business community.

The air traveler who'd confronted me is a perfect example. She had been taught the "appropriate" way to order coffee from a corporate training on political correctness and workplace sensitivity. In today's business setting we are afraid to say or do anything for fear of being sued.

Look at the following examples: One employee says to another employee, who has worked at the company for more than 40 years, "Hey, Pops, let me buy you lunch."

A manager, genuinely concerned with an employee she has worked with for over a decade, says, "You broke your arm skiing? I sure hope it was worth it. Just kidding. How long are you going to have to wear that cast?"

A birthday cake with The Big 4-0 written on it is served to a co-worker in the office. One of the cards accompanying it reads, "Turning 40 is like visiting an all-you-can-eat buffet: What should be hot is cold, what should be firm is limp, and the buns are bigger than anything else on the menu."

One employee tells another, "I love the way you guys express yourselves."

A manager sees a group of female employees at lunch and says, "Hi, girls."

All of these examples could be considered inappropriate in the workplace regardless of one's intent. And since the courts have decided that an individual's perception of a given circumstance always trumps the actual intention, we are all guilty of creating harassment in the workplace—or, in legal jargon, a hostile work environment.

Without doubt, there are people among us who live to express their hatred, anger, fears and prejudices in whatever insidious, discriminatory way they can get away with. The problem is that they are now able to hide in the shadows of political correctness and "appropriate" conduct in the workplace.

I would prefer to see who those people are. I want them to be free to express themselves, so I can identify them and deal with them as I see fit. But what about the rest of us? Is it possible that there are individuals whose sincere intent is to enjoy sharing a laugh at themselves and with each other? Are there those of us who actually call another individual "sugar," "honey" or "sweetheart" simply because it feels endearing, kind or familiar? We all have the right to ask someone not to address us like that; but why shouldn't we have the right to say it in the first place?

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 is, from my point of view, the most important piece of legislation to ever pass through Congress. The statute's intent was to protect all of us from the worst of us. But in today's (continued on page 80)

- ★ In 2004 the EEOC received 13,136 official complaints of sexual harassment; 51% or 6,708 were found to have no reasonable cause.
- ★ In 2004 a total of 58,328 complaints were filed with the EEOC against employers under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964; 17% or 10,146 were resolved in favor of charging parties, with a total of $128.6 million paid out.

Clay Graham, a head writer and executive producer of network sitcoms for ten years, wrote in the Los Angeles Times that if "Lyle wins her sexual-harassment lawsuit ... for discussing sexual matters during the course of writing sexually themed episodes, by extension, the court reporter and bailiff would have legal precedent to sue the judge and prosecutor for their use of ribald language during the course of that very trial. By legal definition, the courtroom would be a 'hostile workplace.'"

True or not, it is hard to argue with Graham's closing remark: "If you think sitcoms are unfunny now, wait until you see what comes out of government-enforced, G-rated writers' rooms."

LIBRARIANS AGAINST HARD-CORE

In 2001 the EEOC received a complaint from librarians at the Minneapolis Public Library, who alleged that they were being forced to endure an "intimidating, hostile and offensive working environment" because patrons were viewing hard-core pornography at Internet kiosks.

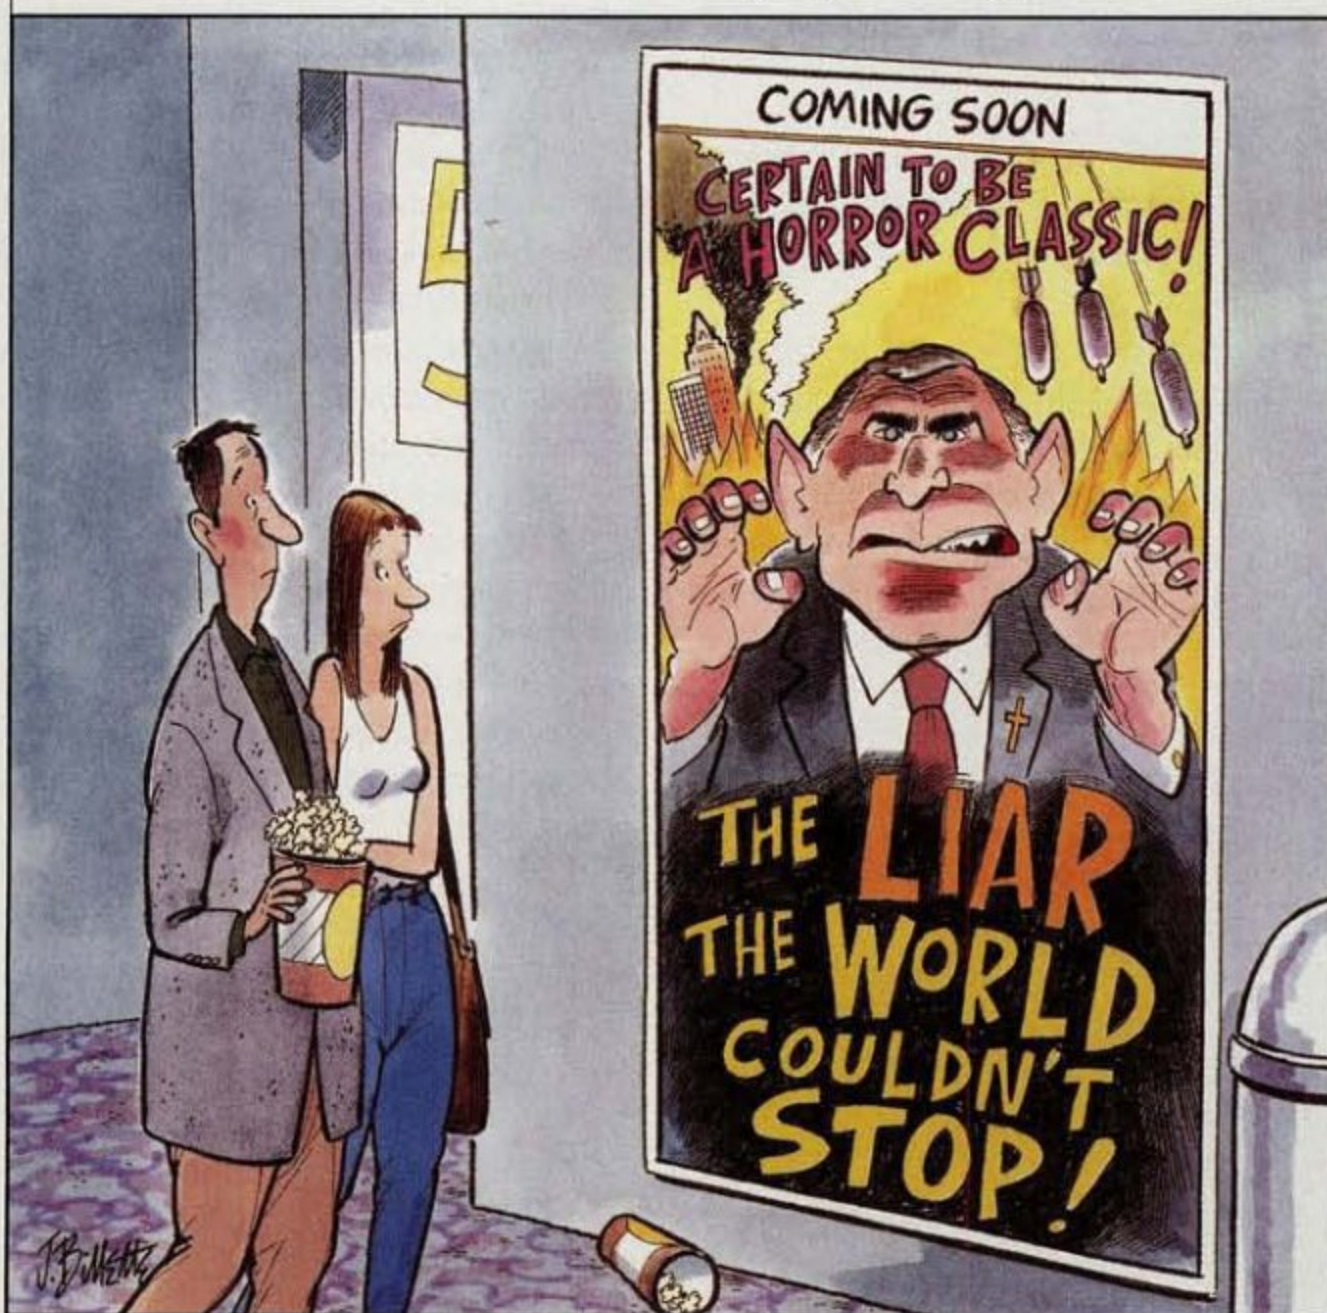

In their complaint a dozen Minneapolis librarians stated that they could see the computer screens from the reference desk and that at least once a day they were subjected to images of sex acts. The staffers also maintained that besides seeing explicit pictures over the patrons' shoulders while either walking past or to shut off unattended screens, they often found hard-core material in the library's color printers.

When the librarians went to their superiors and asked that Internet filters be placed on the computers, library directors denied their request, citing the First Amendment. The EEOC felt differently. In issuing its preliminary ruling against the Minneapolis Library System, the commission suggested that the library institute changes and pay each of the 12 employees $75,000—a total of $900,000.

Law Professor Eugene Volokh of the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) says that the threat of large legal judgments could push libraries toward self-censorship. "People are suggesting that workplace harassment preempts First Amendment protections," he notes.

Shortly after the employee suit was filed, Minneapolis library officials posted warnings against viewing (continued on page 82)

How Do You Take It?

Hey, I just heard a really funny joke: This old cowboy walks into a bar, goes up to the bartender and says, "Pardner, I need a drink real bad."

Bartender says, "See that jar of money down at the end of the bar? It's all yours if you'll do three things."

"Tell me what you need me to do," the cowboy says.

"First, see that big stud cowboy sittin' down at the bar? I want you to walk up to him and with one punch, clock him and deck him. Second, I got a mean ol' pit bull out back with a bad tooth. I need you to pull that tooth. And third, I got a 500-pound sister upstairs, hasn't been laid in six years. I'm gonna need that taken care of too."

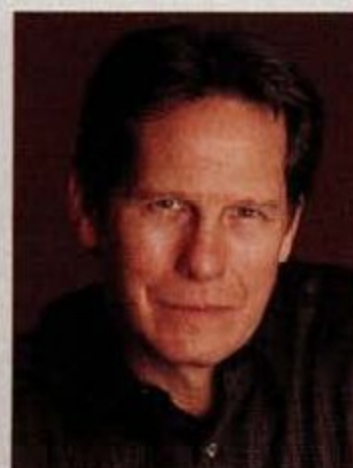

"Done," the old cowboy says. Then he gets up, walks down to the end of the bar, taps the stud cowboy on the shoulder, hits him with one huge shot and decks him. Then he walks out the back door and, as the bar quiets, the room is suddenly filled with the sound of a dog barking wildly with high-pitched squeals and horrible yelps. Soon the screen door flies open, and the cowboy comes back in, his shirt bloody and ripped to shreds. "All right," he says. "Now where's that sister with the bad tooth?"

Now whether you find this joke to your personal liking or not, should I be prevented from telling it to fellow co-workers? If someone doesn't want to hear it, shouldn't he or she have the right to simply walk away?

No, it's better that I don't tell a joke that's meant to share a laugh, because someone could perceive it as insensitive to old cowboys, dogs, weight-challenged females, dysfunctional families or alcohol-challenged individuals. A seemingly humorous work environment becomes a hostile work environment with one harmless joke.

We should ask ourselves: Are we really as offended by remarks, jokes, gestures, statements on T-shirts, etc., as we sometimes pretend to be? Do we really care? Is there actual racial bias or discrimination in ordering coffee black? Not until I was told to perceive it that way.

Well, I'm off to my next assignment. Oh, that's right, I never mentioned what I do. I train corporations in anti-harassment and how to manage safely, effectively and in a nondiscriminating manner within the law. And now I order tea. ☯

A HIGH COST FOR HIGHER EDUCATION

One of the most disturbing trends at universities is a growing crackdown on free expression through the establishment of campus speech codes. At Texas Tech University—with a student body of 28,000—educators were so concerned about the offensive potential of free speech, they restricted it to a 20-foot “free speech gazebo.”

While designed to prevent hostile environments, these actions have a chilling effect on free thought. Take the case of Timothy Mertes, a student at the University of North Carolina. In 2004, Mertes was enrolled in the course Literature and Cultural Diversity, led by instructor Elyse Crystall. During a class discussion on whether heterosexuals feel “threatened” by homosexuals, Mertes unwittingly admitted that as a Christian he felt “disgusted” by homosexual behavior.

After class, Crystall fired off an e-mail to her students. “What we heard Thursday at the end of class constitutes ‘hate speech’ and is completely unacceptable,” the teacher wrote. “It has created a hostile environment.”

Upon hearing of the incident, North Carolina Congressman Walter B. Jones requested a federal civil rights probe, noting, “If you don’t have that right [to express yourself] in a collegiate classroom, what rights do you have?”

In July 2003 the Board of Regents at UCLA approved a policy change that prohibited romantic relationships between faculty members and the students they teach or oversee, fearing that such involvements could lead to expensive harassment litigation. The move was allegedly made after a distinguished male professor at another UC campus got drunk with one of his female students, and sexual harassment allegedly ensued.

“Imagine the following,” wrote UCLA psychology professor Paul Abramson in the Los Angeles Times. “A prominent professor, female this time, has $100 in her purse. She is robbed on campus. In response, the university proclaims ‘no more money (or purses) on campus,’ thereby equating the availability of money with precipitating the crime of robbery. That is much the same as equating the availability of sex with precipitating the crime of rape, say, or any other sex crime, including sexual harassment.”

The penalty, whether for falling in love or engaging in consensual sex: loss of employment. Given all of the foregoing, it would seem that today’s workplace is better suited for robots rather than humans consumed by a myriad of passions and emotions. 🐼

★ In 2004, 280 discrimination suits were filed in federal court by the EEOC under Title VII. Of these, 264 were resolved in favor of the complaining party with total benefits awarded of $168 million.

Give Her A Cum-Drenching She'll Never Forget!

Learning "The Ropes"...

The letters keep pouring in, written by women of all ages, about a supplement that has made their sex lives "explosive" (literally). I'd like to share one, from a loyal reader...

Rebecca writes:

Nancy, my boyfriend has always satisfied me sexually. With an ample cock-size, average endurance, and creative oral technique, he almost never fails to get me off. But what I experienced the night he returned home from a business trip in Europe was the surprise of my life—a fucking I will never forget, and an orgasm that no man before him has ever come close to equaling.

Since I love to suck cock, the second my boyfriend dropped his luggage I stripped off his clothes and proceeded to please him with my best welcome-home blowjob.

Before long my wet mouth had him pumping gob after hot gob down my throat and on my face. With a fistful of throbbing cock, I held on for dear life as he unloaded his sweet jism; these were "power throbs" that kept launching massive amounts of cum. I've never seen anything like it—a man having a multiple! I was so totally turned on being nearly drowned with his super-human load. And it didn't stop there! He stayed erect, throwing me down on the floor and pounding my twat until we both had simultaneous, earth-shattering orgasms, practically causing both of us to pass out. The rest of the evening and throughout the week we fucked ourselves into a frenzy; his recovery time between these super-charged orgasms was that of a teenage boy.

Since that night, all I can think of is sucking and fucking my new "power lover" all hours of the day. Finally, curiosity got the best of me, so I asked what had turned him into such a fuck machine. His answer: He had learned "The Ropes."

Turns out my boyfriend had spent an evening in Europe with a Swedish nutritionist and his wife of 20 years. The couple was openly sexual and couldn't keep their hands off each other, so my boyfriend asked them their secret. The nutritionist explained he regularly took a natural supplement, and gave my boyfriend a month's supply, telling him it would teach him "the ropes" of great sex.

The supply is about to run out, and we want to know where we can buy this incredible enhancement. Do you know if this product is available in the States?

Rebecca M.
San Diego, CA

Rebecca, as I've mentioned in previous columns, I do know all about what your last boyfriend used to enhance his orgasms. I'm happy to report that across the U.S. and Canada more and more men are finding out and using this unique supplement, learning that not only do they themselves benefit sexually, so too do their partners.

The contractions and release during male orgasm can be multiplied using an all-natural product called Serogen. Although formulated to trigger stronger, longer orgasmic experiences by strengthening the vas deferens muscle in men, an added bonus—from a woman's perspective—is that these powerful contractions men achieve while in the throes of an orgasm can induce an intense, female climax.

Moreover, the term "ropes" Rebecca mentions in her letter is actually European slang for the added contractions and heightened release that cause these rope-like sensations during male orgasm.

As far as finding Serogen in the States, I know of just one importer—Somalab. The company has a product line for men that includes newly added Serogen-SP, a premium blend of the original. If interested in purchasing Serogen or SP, Somalab can be contacted toll-free at 1-866-SOMALAB. Orders can also be placed through Somalab's informational Web site: www.learntheropes.net.

If this chesty 20-year-old looks familiar, you've probably dropped by Las Vegas's Déjà Vu club. "I dance there every weekend," Cody coos, "and I model during the week in Los Angeles. I love dancing; it's the best workout ever. Well, except for sex."

It may come as a shock, but Cody wasn't always this sexy. "I never had any boobs growing up," she explains. "At age 16 I promised myself that once I had the cash, I'd get big, juicy jugs." Naturally, the dramatic change in cup size inspired the hazel-eyed honey to start taking it all off.

Cody is anything but shy, even when spilling the beans on her bedroom antics. "First of all, I'm bi," she reveals, "and I'm into guys and girls for different reasons. When it comes to men, I love to suck cock. It's the only thing that actually makes my pussy wet. Once I'm wet, there's no need for further foreplay. You'd better just fuck me hard!"

"With women," Cody continues, "it's all about soft touching, kissing and massaging. Then we get down to breaking out the toys, and I want to be rammed, then slammed."

When not working the brass pole or fucking her brains out, this half-Asian, half-German fox is a real homebody. "I love to just kick back and relax at my place," she says. "Smoke a little weed and maybe have sex with my friends."

"Someday when I'm really old, like 30 or something," Cody envisions, "I want to go to medical school and become an ob/gyn so I can deliver babies. For now I plan to just keep dancing and posing naked."

A middle-aged woman had just returned home after a shopping trip. She was upset and told her husband about a shoe salesman who had been rude to her. It seems that while the salesman was helping her try on shoes, he looked up her dress and noticed she wasn't wearing underwear. Without thinking, the guy blurted out, "If that thing was full of ice cream, ma'am, I'd eat every bite."

The lady was insulted and now wanted to know what her spouse was going to do about it. As his missus fumed, hubby just sat there and grunted.

Finally, the wife became hysterical and insisted on knowing why her husband wouldn't go down to the store and punch the rude salesman in the face.

"Well," the man of the house replied, "there are three reasons. First of all, you shouldn't have even been shopping for shoes since you have a whole closetful of them. Secondly, you have no business going shopping without panties on. But most of all, I'm not going to punch anyone who's big enough to eat that much ice cream!"

Question: What's better than fucking two 18-year-old girls at once?

Answer: Nothing.

A young couple got married, and it was a tradition in the bride's family that the best man dance with the bride for the first song. The best man performed his duty...but then they danced to another song. And a third. By the time the fourth song came on, the groom ran up and kicked his new wife between the legs. A riot broke out, and all the guests were hauled off to jail.

In court the next week the judge asked the best man what had happened. "Well, Your Honor, the bride and I were just dancing," he testified, "and the groom suddenly ran up and kicked her right between the legs."

"Why, that must have hurt something awful," the judge remarked.

"No kidding," the best man muttered. "The sourpuss broke three of my fingers."

Question: How did the blonde fuck up her first bank robbery?

Answer: She tied up the safe and blew the guard.

An M.D. had a young lady in his office for a checkup. As she took off her blouse, the doctor noticed a red H covering her flat chest. "How did you get that mark on your torso?" he wondered.

"My boyfriend went to Harvard," the gal replied, "and he's so proud of it, he never takes off his Harvard sweat-shirt—even when we make love."

A few days later another gal came in for a checkup. After she'd removed her blouse and bra, the doctor was curious about the blue Y adorning her bosom. "How did you get that mark on your breasts?" he asked.

"My boyfriend went to Yale," the chick explained, "and he's so proud of it, he never takes off his Yale sweat-shirt—even when we make love."

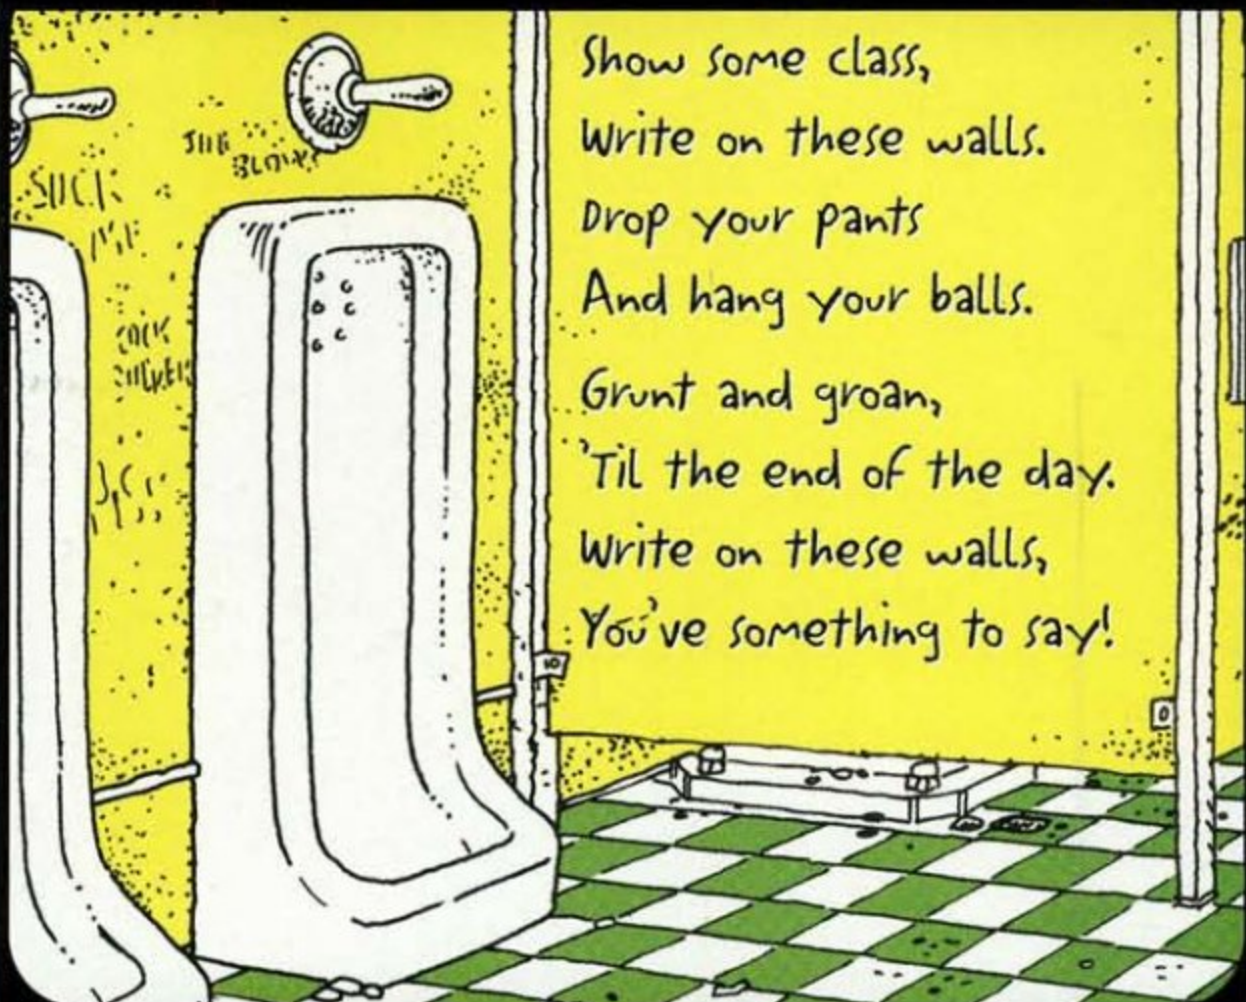

Several days later another tart arrived for a checkup, and soon the doctor was observing the red M on her chest. "Do you have a boyfriend who owns a University of Maryland sweatshirt?" he asked.

"No," the damsel replied, "but my girlfriend has a Wisconsin sweatshirt!"

A blonde was asked why she kept empty beer bottles in the refrigerator.

"Duh!" she answered. "They're for my friends who don't drink!"

"Miss Beazley learned a new trick today, but now I owe her a high-level appointment!"

By Tom Farrell

The Beaver State's Rock 'n' Roll Soldiers have some glowing booze, a growing buzz and so many musicians to kill.

It's 8:30 p.m. in a crowded Thai restaurant in the Silver Lake section of Los Angeles, and Marty Larson-Xu is hunched over a bowl of steaming noodles. Occasionally peeking out from under his shaggy mop-top haircut, the 22-year-old wraps his arm around the bowl with a protective gesture familiar to large families, or perhaps it's because this is the first decent meal the rocker's had in a couple of days.

Xu counts out handfuls of change and crumpled dollar bills and then stands up. Actually, he unfolds. Tall, lanky and handsome, the kid looks too shy to be the lead singer of the "next big thing"—the Rock 'n' Roll Soldiers. We spot Xu, who introduces himself and sits down next to us, smiling sheepishly and apologizing about the palpable stink. For the past three days he's been living in a tour van with no access to showers.

Thirty minutes later the only thing we smell is impending success. Xu is onstage with his bandmates in front of a packed audience at the hip Space-land nightclub, and the quartet has the place jumping. Their look, sound and vibe combine the raw and raucous feel of The New York Dolls and The Stooges, armed with a live show that is as contagious as their tunes.

An hour after their last number the Rock 'n' Roll Soldiers are looking for a place to flop. They choose a dank recording studio near the old

A&M Records building, in the heart of Hollywood. Amid abandoned cars enclosed by a wrought iron fence, the group joins local musician Vincenzo Thomas Amato. Their friend is hoisting cases of Everglo into the venerable studio, which supposedly hosted the likes of Jimi Hendrix.

Everglo is a vodka/tequila liqueur kicked up with blasts of caffeine and ginseng which comes in bottles that glow in the dark. Soon the band members are holding them up to naked lightbulbs dangling from the ceiling and tossing them around like glowsticks. Fresh off his X Games gig, Amato is serving as the volunteer bartender for the evening. Drinking from phosphorescent cups, Xu and bassist Evan Seroffsky start putting the Everglo away. Still riding the stage adrenaline, drummer Oliver Brown pounds away on a studio kit in the next room, while lead guitarist Kevin Sciou sends power chords and bluesy solos through his Morley Wah pedal.

"We all met in school, in Eugene, Oregon," Xu says over the din. "We came up with the name Rock 'n' Roll Soldiers, which was the name of a tour from Radio Birdman, one of our favorite bands. Then we just kinda sucked for four years while everybody gave us shit about our name." Smiling, he drains his glowing brew.

Eventually, the group began circulating demos and EPs. The single "Funny Little Feeling," with hit written all over it in neon letters, caught the attention of the music industry. Next thing you know, the song shows up on the One Tree Hill soundtrack, then in a nationally broadcast Verizon commercial featuring a snippet of the band performing their breakthrough tune.

"Verizon flew us to Vancouver and put us up in this really nice hotel," Seroffsky recalls. "It had these huge glass windows, so we walked around naked a lot."

The folks at Atlantic Records took a serious interest, but it had nothing to do with the band's exhibitionist tendencies. "They liked our songs and our live energy," Xu explains.

Signing up with Atlantic, the Rock 'n' Roll Soldiers have finally made the big time, and their debut album—So Many Musicians to Kill—is only the beginning. "In the meantime, look for us on the road," Xu quips. "You'll probably be able to smell us." ■

Fans of The Killers rejoice! While the three previously unreleased (in the U.S.) bonus tracks on the Hot Fuss limited edition CD whet the appetite of the Las Vegas rockers' rabid fan base, let it be known that they want more. Fret not; the Killers are in the studio recording new material. Before they went back to the drawing board, the band took some time out for us in a private, backstage room before a Los Angeles concert.

Killers vocalist Brandon Flowers and drummer Ronnie Vannucci are dressed and ready to take the stage.

"Hot Fuss was a self-produced album," a soft-spoken Flowers says of their first effort.

When thoughts then turn to the unreleased sophomore record, the guys explain that they're debating whether somebody is needed to guide the producing or engineering.

"There are so many things you can do to a song," Flowers points out. "People who help bands call it 'putting songs on the treadmill.' We've been really good lately at realizing where we've overwritten."

Good songwriting is perhaps the strongest suit that Hot Fuss has had going for it—the debut album has sold more than 4 million copies worldwide. Topping that will be a daunting task, but it sounds as if the quartet may outdo themselves. The still-untitled new release may be helmed by someone more experienced on the mixing board. Nothing is confirmed, but Flowers and Vannucci were happy to explore the possibilities.

"We have a lot of producing abilities ourselves," Flowers says. "And we admire producers for making good albums...[but is it] because of the producer or just the band that created a good sound? We're looking at Flood and Steve Lillywhite and a lot of people who we like. So we'll see."

"We wanna get to Rolling Stones level," Vannucci jokes. "'Cause they're like ... 86, 87 years old."

"We want to stay important to the people," Flowers postulates. "To music in general. U2—they just keep doing it. And next album they'll have another hit. I guarantee it."

"There's no stoppin' us," Flowers promises.

We believe him, and Killers fans should too. ■

NEWS

Los Angeles-based 8 Bit Weapon are taking the whole '80s scene to a new level. The duo's forte is using classic '70s and '80s game consoles, old computers and vintage synthesizers to create a modern sound. Their arsenal includes a Commodore 64 and 128, a couple of Nintendo Game Boy classics, an Intellivision synthesizer, a Suzuki Omnichord, hybrid lo-fi acoustic-electric drums and an assortment of other vintage and toy synthesizers. The band recently performed at the E3 gaming megaconvention and an Intellivision-sponsored gig at a gallery featuring video-game-inspired art. The musicians' lo-fi aesthetic mirrored the minimalist approach of '70s video games.

"If you want to spend three weeks finishing up a game, fine," said Intellivision President Keith Robinson as 8 Bit Weapon bleeped and whirred in the background. "But if you just want to sit down for a few hours and experience fast and fun gameplay, well, that's what Intellivision is all about." Here Cums The Sun

By Michelle
McCarthy

Chances are you won't be seeing The Sun's video for "Romantic Death" on MTV. Instead of going with a standard performance piece or following a convoluted plotline, the Ohio quintet opted for a more unique, do-it-yourself approach: showing, from the shoulders up, a contingent of (mostly female) wankers.

"A friend of the band came across this Australian Web site that had people send in videotapes of themselves masturbating," says drummer Sam Brown. "He thought it would be a cool idea to sync it up to the song because it's real sexy."

Originally posted on the band's MySpace page, the voyeuristic video quickly spread across the Internet and has already been watched by more than a million viewers.

This video treatment isn't the only indication that the pop-rockers have an affinity for the unconventional. Their debut full-length release on Warner Bros., Blame It on the Youth, is being touted as the world's first DVD album. The disc contains audio tracks that can be downloaded to a computer or MP3 player and a video for each of the 14 songs.

"A lot of people are downloading music these days and using iPods," Brown adds. "So it's not too much of a stretch to ask them to throw the DVD into their computer and burn themselves an audio disc. We thought it would be a cool experiment."

But will their cool experiment translate to booming album sales? Only time will tell if The Sun rises or sets. ■

Mean Reds Together at Last and This Is Our Wedding Record Collection

Fresh out of high school and still bearing the teenage angst to prove it ("Til Death Do Us Party," "Teenagers Only Zone"), the Mean Reds sound like the Germs if they'd gone math rock. The energy level is nonstop, and singer Anthony Anzalone screams through enough meter changes that your head will spin.

My Morning Jacket Z

ATO Records/RCA

Fresh blood (guitarist Carl Broemel and keyboardist Bo Koster) takes the reverb-drenched Americana of Louisville, Kentucky's My Morning Jacket in exciting new directions on their fourth studio album, while frontman Jim James continues to grow as a songwriter. Shorter, tighter and more upbeat than their previous outings, Z delivers warm, trippy alt-country that rocks.

Dandy Warhols Odditorium or Warlords of Mars Capitol

With a number a tracks clocking in at over seven minutes, it's apparent that the Dandys are going for something different here. But murky vocals and long-winded, aimless jams leave you wishing they'd stuck to their dream-pop roots.

APSCI Thanks for Asking Quannum

This is the perfect mixture of electronica, rap and vocals. Lyrics are delivered in swift underground fashion by Bronx native Raphael LaMotta, a/k/a RA. Tender vocals by RA's wife, Australian singer Dana Diaz-Tutaan, round out this experimental voyage into the ether.

Morningwood Morningwood Capitol

The pop sensibility of the Go-Go's meets the snarling attitude of LeTigre on Morningwood's self-titled debut CD. Former members of Cibo Matto, the Wallflowers and Spacehog join newcomer Chantal Claret in creating disco-tinged cotton candy goodness. Ultra-catchy and fun.

GAME ON

Meet the Xbox 360—the next generation of gaming. BY TOM FARRELL

If you didn't find one of these under your Christmas tree, keep begging for one. The Xbox 360 takes the crown for the gaming system to beat, with its awesome graphics and sound, warp-speed processors and options that let you hit the Internet, play music and DVDs, and more.

Your games never looked, played or sounded this good. Here's a handful of new releases and accessories we recommend for the ultimate Xbox 360 and Xbox online experience.

Perfect Dark Zero

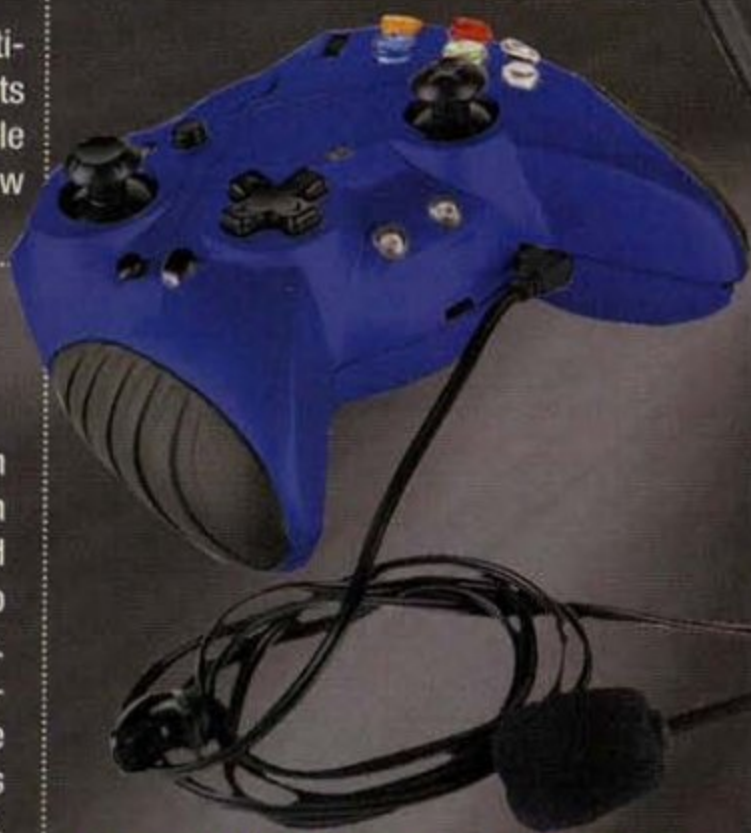

Joanna Dark returns in the Xbox 360-exclusive prequel to the award-winning, multi-platinum, first-person shooter Perfect Dark. Dark unearths a global conspiracy that pits her against a shadowy corporation bent on world domination. Check out the incredible graphics while you play through the action-packed storyline. And there's plenty of new weapons. From Rare Ltd. for Microsoft Game Studios, exclusively for the Xbox 360.

Project Gotham Racing 3

Speed alone will not earn you the checkered flag in PGR3—bold moves and daring maneuvers help you rack up points. Choose from 80 authentic sports cars and five cities, including Las Vegas and New York. Online options let you race against anyone, anywhere, anytime. In HDTV with Dolby Digital 5.1 sound. The online Gotham TV option lets you watch other players' race replays. From Bizarre Creations for Microsoft Game Studios.

Intec Wireless Live Controller

One of our favorite controllers for the Xbox 360. Wireless, with a headset—perfect for LAN and global head-to-head gaming action. Powered by Bluetooth.

Dead or Alive 4

One of videogamedom's most popular fighting masterpieces, Dead or Alive 4 truly demonstrates the awesome power of the Xbox 360, whose peeps tell us that DoA4 will "be the defining gaming experience, as it will encompass all that Xbox 360 has to offer, giving players the most rewarding digital fighting experience to date on any video game console." Word. Developed by Team Ninja; published by Tecmo.

Kameo: Elements of Power

Exclusively for the Xbox 360, Kameo is a mystical action-adventure game with incredible graphics and innovative gameplay. The combat system allows you to harness and employ the unique powers of ten elemental warriors, all in a vast magical world with lush environments and marvelous creatures. From Rare Ltd. for Microsoft Game Studios.

Call of Duty 2

The award-winning series offers an unparalleled portrayal of the cinematic intensity and chaos of battle as seen through the eyes of infantrymen in epic World War II battles. CoD2 features a proprietary new engine, staggering graphics, advanced A.I. technology and unforgettable combat sequences.

Tony Hawk's American Wasteland

Skate and BMX bike yourself silly in a massive Los Angeles world that was specifically designed with the board sporter and other daredevils in mind. From Neversoft for Activision.

Oblivion: The Elder Scrolls IV

The latest chapter in the Elder Scrolls saga features one of the most richly detailed and vibrant game worlds of all time. In fact, this might well be the number one role-playing game ever created for any console. O:TESIV makes the leap from PC to Xbox 360 seamlessly, offering the powerful gameplay and unprecedented graphics that have made this series so popular. You can create and play any character, from noble warriors to sinister assassins, in a fantasy world of forests, dungeons and towns so vivid that you'll never want to leave. The A.I. system gives Oblivion's characters a full 24/7 schedule, while the thousand-plus nonplayer characters eat, sleep and achieve goals just like a real world. From Bethesda for 2K Games.

BRIANNA BARKS VIVID VIBRIES

It's hard to believe that the world-famous stunner once thought of herself as ugly.

"Growing up, I always felt really dorky and skinny," recalls Briana, who was born in Munich,
Germany. "As a kid,
I looked like a clumsy giraffe."

A lot of women in the porn industry claim to be stars.

Although their talents in sucking and fucking are appreciated, most are just adult actresses. However, Vivid Girl Briana Banks is truly a top-notch porn star. With over 20 feature films under her belt, the blue-eyed beauty has performed with all the big names in the biz, including Jenna Jameson.

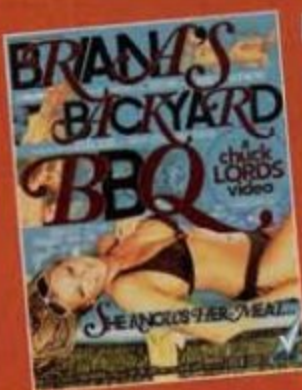

At the age of seven the fräulein and her family emigrated to California, where she began a mainstream-modeling career as a teenager. "I even made the cover of Teen Magazine," Briana gushes, "but I never seemed to make any real money. I had to supplement my income by working at a crappy insurance job." Lucky for Briana (and all of us), her fate changed when she checked out the classifieds in a local paper.

"An ad said I could make $1,000 a day modeling," Briana tells us, "and could lead to an exciting career in adult entertainment. I'm so glad I read that paper." In the future, Briana hopes to launch her own line of adult movies and perhaps even return to college full time to get a degree.

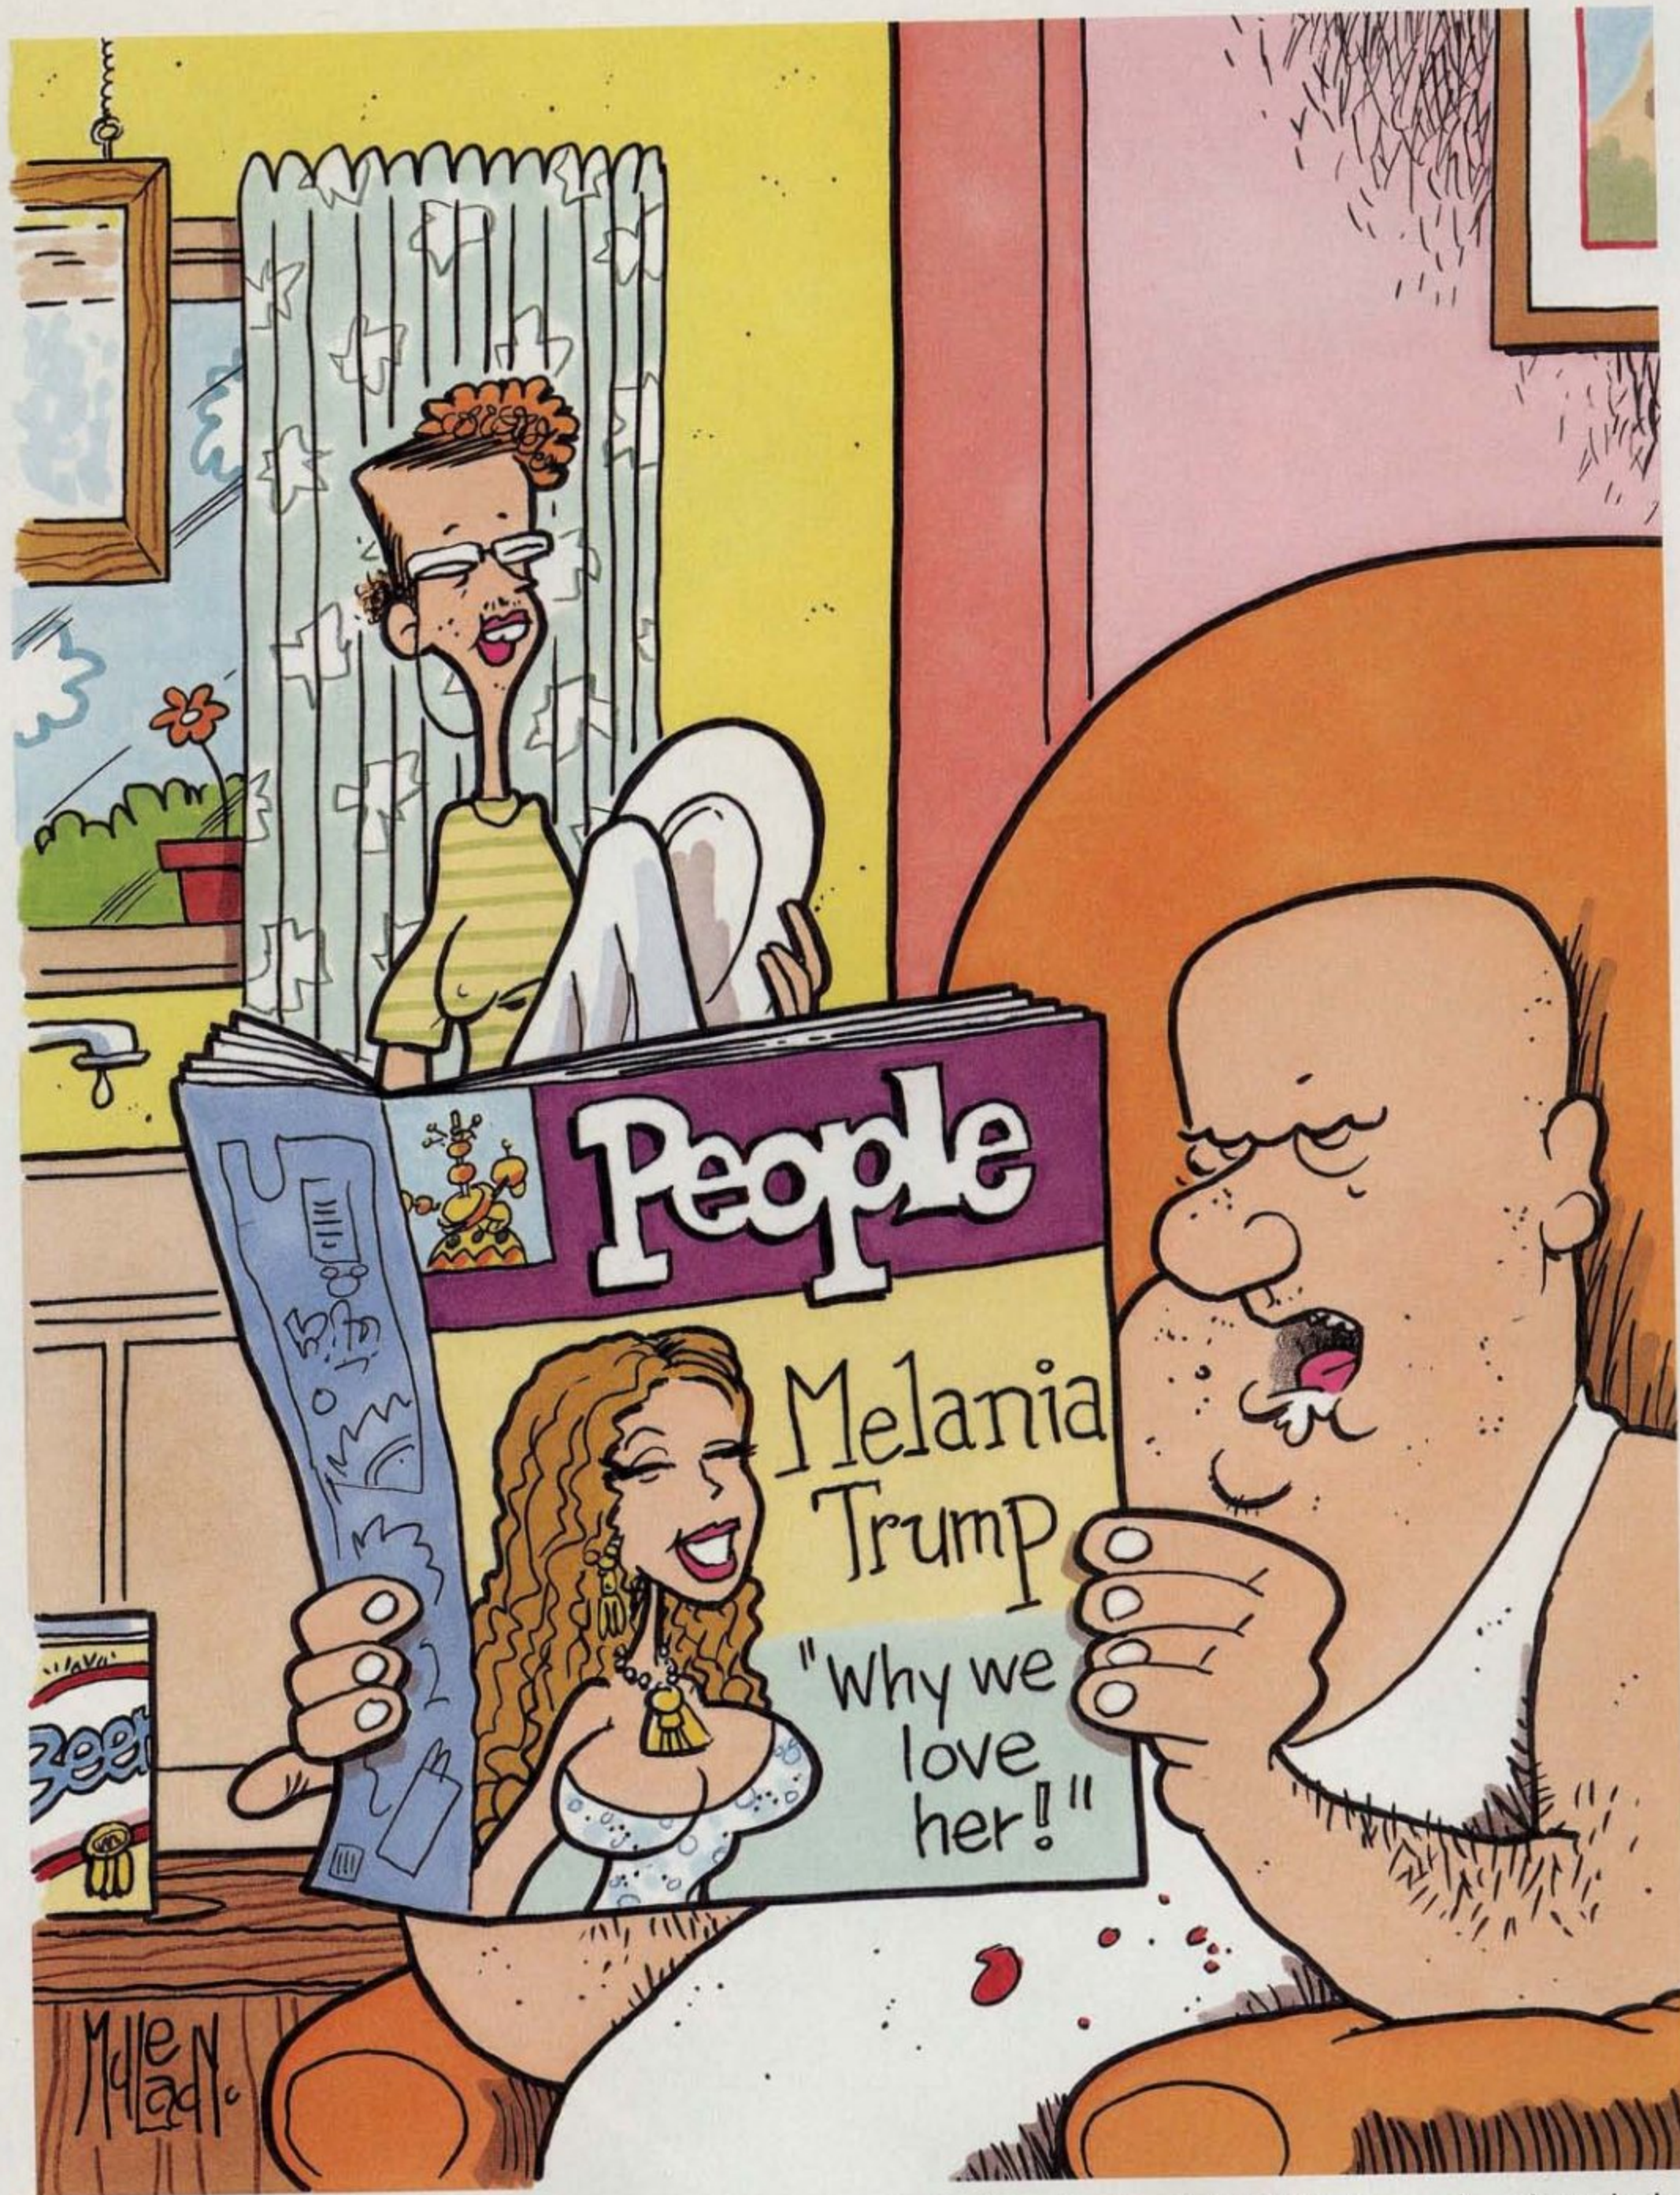

Briana Banks stars in such Vivid XXX releases as Aftermath, Blonde and Blonder, Briana Loves Jenna, Briana's Backyard BBQ, End Game and Pretty Girl. Before signing with Vivid, Briana also appeared in HUSTLER Video's Mr. Beaver #4 on VHS and DVD. Call 877-325-6464 or visit HUSTLERhollywood.com to order.

EASY PICKIN'S

A horny coed at Marymount Manhattan College, Brandi Buchman has mastered the art of the cyberhookup.

The leather backseat was so slippery from our sweat that it became virtually impossible to hold my all-fours position as Ryan thrust into me from behind, and Chuck pulled my hair while I moved my lips up and down on him.

The only stimulation I'd predicted that evening was for my fingers—against my computer's mouse. My plans involved scanning the latest desirables on Facebook.com, a nationwide Web site connecting thousands of college students searching for fun. Thanks to Facebook, a down-and-dirty-threesome in the confines of a Lincoln Navigator had become a throbbing reality.

At Marymount Manhattan College, everyone I know uses the site—but the ladies exercise its full potential. Located in the heart of New York City, the private liberal arts school is made up of 75% women and only 25% men. Because it seems a substantial number of male students are gay, Marymount's unofficial nickname is "Fairymount." Of course, there are straight men, but it's slim pickings.

Enter the miracle of online hookups. A typical Facebook encounter leads to hard flirting, cybersex or maybe lewd phone calls—if it gets that far at all. Facebook attracts lots of closeted nymphos. I know this because I am one of them. Naturally, I flirt online, but after the first nonvirtual fling, my sex life has skyrocketed into a fantasyworld.

For three weeks I corresponded with Ryan, 20, a New Yorker eager to satisfy my needs. I got the call on a Wednesday evening. He said, "I'm promising you big things, cutie, if we can hook up tonight." We arranged a time. Then he added, "I'm bringing a friend." It wasn't a request or a question.

Thirty minutes later I was sitting between Ryan and his friend Charles in the rear of a parked SUV. My knees were parted as each massaged my thighs. Holding my gaze at Ryan's lap, I reached back to slide my fingertips over his buddy's growing denim bulge. Would they be all talk?

In a moment my skirt was lifted over my hips. Ryan positioned his lap near my face as Chuck pulled me down onto him. The sound I made, not quite a moan, cracked through the car. After a quick switch, Chuck buried my face into his crotch and Ryan played pinch hitter.

An hour later I'd collapsed in the backseat. Chuck lit a cigarette and drove me back to my dorm. As I stumbled out on weary legs, Ryan smiled and said, "Keep up with your e-mails. You wouldn't want to miss another opportunity."

Immediately upon returning to the dorm, I checked my Facebook account. Inside were several more recent e-mails from college guys situated all over Manhattan, Staten Island and even my hometown of Washington, D.C. The guys detailed how they were sitting at home alone, surfing for a steamy encounter, just as I had been only hours before.

Reading my new messages—Juan from Pace University, Alex from New York University, Robert from Hofstra—I imagined the delicious possibilities. When I refreshed my Web page to check my in-box, there he was. Brown hair, chocolaty skin and a sly grin that made me wonder. Maybe he'd be my next hookup. His profile was tame—just another Hofstra frat boy. We connected and, almost immediately, he agreed to take the train into the city and rendezvous at Marymount.

What resulted was our awkward first meeting. Hardly knowing each other, there was an unspoken question of how far we'd go. To fill the gaps we talked about college life, which led into conversation about sex, which led into deep, methodically passionate fucking against the windowpane of my dorm room. And I couldn't have cared less that all of Manhattan could see my tits pressed hard against the glass, jiggling to the rhythm of my latest conquest. I can't wait to do it again.

Meeting new people, debriefing personalities via a profile and then hooking up spontaneously is the new bar scene. Of course, the media would have you believe that our generation has ditched reality for cyber-reality. But I know that every subtle touch and every thrust feels real enough to me.

Brandi Buchman hails from the Washington, D.C., area, but is currently studying English at Marymount Manhattan College. Previously published in Teen Voices magazine, she aspires to write a book documenting her most noteworthy exploits.

HUSTLER has long been a haven for uninhibited sweethearts, but bookworms who love showing skin are a special breed. Coeds: Be a BWOC by sending us a handful of naughty pix and garner $350 in financial assistance!

"A guy could pleasure me orally from supertime until I have to go to my next class!"

"It's kinda cool getting naked for strangers," purrs this senior at Chicago's Roosevelt University. While prepping for a paralegal career, Jenn is a moonlighting card dealer, and in the bedroom the single gal plays it straight. "When it comes to sex, I'm very spontaneous and outgoing," confides the 5-foot-4 target-shooting and traveling buff. "That explains my current fantasy of being taken on a roulette wheel by the high roller I've been lusting for ever since I first laid eyes on him!" What a spin! —Photos by Friend

JENN

"I love going to a college where most of the students are guys," pipes Leah, 20, a sophomore at Stevens Institute of Technology in Hoboken, New Jersey. To be exact, the ratio is 3-to-1 for the biomedical engineering major, whose extracurricular activities include canoeing, lacrosse and a steady regimen of sex. "I'm a crazy bedmate," the 5-footer admits. "I thrash around and scream bloody murder when I come. Some guys want to stuff a gag in my mouth so no one hears the racket, but I can think of something better than that." A native Hawaiian who spends her summers back home, Leah fantasizes about "fucking doggy-style in a catamaran off Diamond Head." —Photos by Friend

"This semester I'd like to be very unladylike inside the Statue of Liberty!"

ELIGIBILITY: Candidates must be 18 years of age or older and currently enrolled in an accredited school. To be considered for exposure here, please follow detailed instructions in model release that appears on page 133 of this issue and indicate Real College Girls on submission envelope. All published RCG applicants have a shot at HUSTLER amateur models' annual $5,000 grand prize!

"Oh, did I come in your mouth? Sorry, baby, I was concentratin' on the game!"

SHERRI

"I'm getting an adrenaline rush thinking about so many guys looking at me," says this 28-year-old homemaker out of Lavonia, Georgia. "I'm a little kinky anyway, but being in HUSTLER takes the cake." Disclosing her pastimes, Sherri rattles off, "Dancing, karaoke and keeping my man satisfied; I love giving head and swallowing." Not strictly a domestic jezebel, the Peach Stater also enjoys escapades in a car. "Sometimes I just can't control my urges,"

she reckons. Sherri's dreamy love nest is "on the roof when it's raining cats and dogs." —Photos by Fiancé

CANDY

"I want to make a name for myself in the adult industry," coos this ambitious dancer from Janesville, Wisconsin, and Beaver Hunt may soon have another notable alumna. Candy, 23, is a waifish 4-foot-9 80-pounder, but she's big on motorcycle-riding, "lots of sex" and bondage. The sweetie pie dreams of "fucking Mick Jagger." —Photo by Sister

CYAN

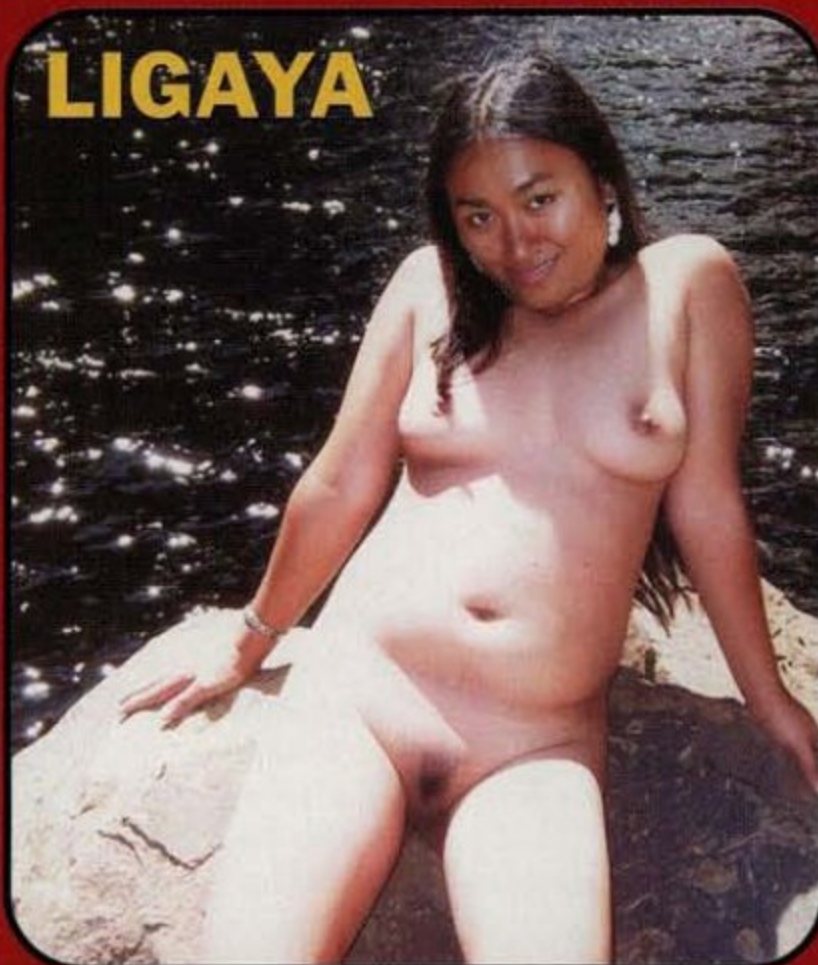

Making her magazine debut is a 21-year-old dancer by way of Waco, Texas, who takes the bull by the horn. "I'm a nympho," Cyan says, "and I like it rough." On a softer note, she also plays piano and sings, but what's music to our ears is this candid confession. "I love giving blowjobs and swallowing!" Cyan's tender fantasy? "Having a threesome with my two best girlfriends." —Photo by Friend

LAURA

"I'm not shy at all," declares this 23-year-old press operator from Knoxville, Tennessee. "On my birthday once, I got onstage at a strip club." Now with a larger audience, Laura (who played softball in her scholastic days) can impress HUSTLER readers with her physical charms and intimate proclivities. "I may look like an angel," the radiant Dixie chick confides, "but I'm very sexually active. I love sex!"—not to mention "shopping, partying and eating out." That last endeavor could mean fine dining, but then again, the doggy-style enthusiast's sexual wish is "girl on girl." —Photo by Friend

LIGAYA

"My husband thought I should share my beauty with everyone," says this scrapbooking and sewing buff from Worley, Idaho, and we concur. Ligaya, 23, is a concessionaire, but being bare in the great outdoors is just one of her endearing traits. The petite Filipina is also a veritable sex goddess. "I like oral, giving and receiving," she divulges, "and doggy-style." Ligaya, who'll cavort as a nasty dominatrix or an innocent schoolgirl, yearns "to do a professional layout, maybe with my guy or favorite toy." —Photo by Husband

SINNAMON

"HUSTLER is the love of my life," purrs Sinnamon, an exotic dancer from San Diego. "When I was a teen, I fantasized about being in it." Now a shipshape 41, the 5-foot-7 workout aficionada is more than a visual treat. "In bed I'm wild and crazy," Sinnamon informs us. "I could have sex 24/7. I tend to be the aggressor, making a man do what I want—even give him anal sex. Which reminds me how much I love to be tied up, blindfolded and fucked in the ass!" And how's this for a fantasy? "I scream for help, and when the guy in the next apartment comes by, I'm lying in my doorway, stark naked and hot to trot!" —Photos by Sinnamon

VALEN

Now it's time to meet a hot chef from Kihei, Hawaii, way. "Modeling nude is a very liberating sensation," voices Valen, who lists her interests as "football, surfing, motor-cycles, reading and boys." For them, the 20-year-old has a mouthwatering menu. "I'm adventurous and fun, and I like giving blowjobs the most." And while some gals dread the thought that their guys are glued to the tube on Sunday afternoons, Valen caters to her dude's gridiron appetite. "I like to watch football and suck dick at the same time. I could be the best girlfriend in history!" The oral-fixated babe's fantasy is simply "two boys."

ROCKSANN

With boxes of skin mags around the house, and a part-time job selling sex toys, it's understandable that this St. Louis real estate agent wound up in HUSTLER. "I wanted to be more than a loyal reader," says Rocksann, 29, who got hitched at a nudist resort and who now "resorts" to such activities as "volleyball, exercise, sex, off-roading and more sex." A lady who prefers to be on top, Rocksann dreams of "a threesome with my husband and a hot chick." —Photo by Husband

AMANDA MAE

A stay-at-home mom, Amanda Mae, 25, reminds us that the baseball season is approaching and that posing for Beaver Hunt is a year-round pursuit. "It was my boyfriend's idea," admits the slenderina from Concord, California, "but I thought it would be exciting and worth a shot." While hanging out with friends and clubbing are on her agenda, camping trips rule. "My sex life is pretty damn good," explains Amanda Mae, who often grabs a toy to double the euphoria, "but going at it outdoors is a rush!" On deck, she hopes, is "a threesome with my boyfriend and best friend." —Photos by Boyfriend

AVA

"I've always wanted to be in a men's magazine," proclaims Ava, who isn't a gardener, "and I finally got the guts to do it." Brave and becoming, the 26-year-old nude-modeling aspirant is a poker-playing Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, housewife—a role for which she's well suited. "I'm an ex-cheerleader," 5-foot-7 Ava chirps, "and I still have the whole getup. My husband is a lucky guy!" And so are HUSTLER readers, who get their first peek at an "amorously submissive" girl-next-door type with the psyche of a porn star. "I've always wanted a stranger to come into my yard while I was sunbathing," Ava fantasizes, "pull my bikini down and slide into me from behind. I want him to pull my hair and roughly grab my hips as he fucks me hard! Finally, I want him to come all over my ass and then leave without saying one word." Yes, Ava digs the quiet type.

"I need more than pansy oral and penetration. I like it really rough!"

SUNNY

"Bodies are beautiful," says this long-time nudist and Burke, Virginia's most ribald librarian. "I love getting lap dances, making home movies, wrestling, fucking (especially anal), sucking, being naked in public and getting off. I'm pretty aggressive, and there isn't anything I haven't tried." Besides climbing Mount Kilimanjaro naked and having sex at the Grand Canyon, Sunny, 30, dreams of "donating my entire body to all the soldiers stationed far from home and having them fill up all my holes with cum." Now that's true-blue patriotism!

JAMIE

Looking for something "fun and adventurous to do," this outgoing administrative assistant from Owatonna, Minnesota, has joined the Beaver sorority. Jamie, 26, is into dancing and working out, but when horny, she's even more vigorous. "I have lots of different toys, and I love playing with my pussy," she fesses up. "I'm also the perfect wife. I always satisfy my husband sexually!" Jamie's dual fantasies are "a long weekend of sex with another woman" and "looking for a two-guy threesome." —Photo by Husband

BLUE-MOVIE ★★★★★ SHOWCASE

Dark Angels #2

DIRECTOR: NICK ANDREWS. STARRING: AUGUST NIGHT, KARINA KAY, MONICA MAYHEM, KRISTEN PRICE, SUNNY LANE, BARRETT BLADE, CHRIS WEBER, EVAN STONE, DILLION DAY AND TOMMY GUNN. DVD & VHS: NEW SENSATIONS.

I New Sensations' big-budget vampire-themed sex flick delivers everything that it promises. Think Blade with blowjobs and Intercourse With the Vampire offering big-bang action sequences. Too often when porn tries to venture into the world of legitimate film, the results are totally disastrous. But Dark Angels #2 avoids the pitfalls of trying to rely on dramatics and costly Hollywood-style special effects. While the sexual performances are some of the best you'll see in XXX, and the acting is often more credible than you'd expect, Dark Angels #2 never forgets that it is first and foremost a dirty movie. The sex scenes, particularly with Sunny Lane and Karina Kay, are memorable. Sunny is a fresh-faced young thing who loves sex, and it shows. She's one of XXX cinema's brightest, prettiest new stars since Teagan Presley. The vampiric posturing is a bit much at times, but it doesn't get in the way of making Dark Angels #2 one of the year's hottest releases. —Tom Farrell Dark Angels #2: Monica Mayhem isn't being basted with garlic sauce by Evan Stone.

Karina and Tommy finish up business in New Sensations' big-budget vampire action flick, Dark Angels #2.

Snazzy Sunny Lane shows us where the sun don't shine as a lawdry Dark Angels #2 vamp.

HUSTLER CHECKS OUT A RED-HOT WEB SITE FOR PUTTING PORN IN YOUR HANDS—AND DVD PLAYER

No due dates. No late fees. No commitments. Cancel anytime. Not that you're ever going to want to cancel.

Think of SugarDVD.com as the Netflix of XXX. Sugar has made it so easy to rent and view adult movies, you may never leave your house or apartment again. Simply scroll through its massive selection of adult viewing material, then put together a list of as many titles as you want. Upon its receipt, SugarDVD.com will automatically send the first available flicks from your order. Films are shipped, individually, via first-class mail in unpretentious packaging and should arrive within two to four business days. The sender is discreetly identified as Oddesse Inc., so there's no having to banter with the postman about a shipment marked "I Cream on Jeannie Inside This Envelope" or "Contents: The Passion of the Ass."

What really gives SugarDVD.com the edge is its quick turnaround time. Sugar is the only adult DVD rental company to operate multiple shipping centers, enabling it to expedite an order from the facility closest to a customer's location.

Once you watch the flick, simply place it back in the provided postage-paid return envelope, drop it in any U.S. mailbox, and the Web site will send the next available offering from your rental lineup.

SugarDVD.com offers six rental plans, catering to the casual porn viewer and diehards who can never get enough hard-core fare. Each plan offers unlimited rentals per month with free shipping, no late fees and no due dates. Plus, if you like a particular movie, it can be purchased at a bargain price.

As for payment, there will be no indication of adults-only purchases on your monthly credit card statements. All rentals are debited to Oddesse Inc.

The SugarDVD Web site—which also offers a really cool Video on Demand option, as well as a ton of sex toys for him and her—is available in almost every state. Orders cannot be shipped to residents in Tennessee, Alabama and certain restricted Zip codes elsewhere. For more info, visit SugarDVD.com.

THE MAN SHOW ÜBER-BRAT & XXX STARS' TIPS ON DVD

Jenna Jameson is just one of the babes offering household hints in an uproarious Man Show disc.

Eagle Rock Entertainment has released the two most popular segments from Comedy Central's defunct classic The Man Show. First up is a best-of compilation of the hilarious "The Man Show Boy," a cherubic sixth-grader whose antics include buying beer with a fake ID and insulting his elders. But since we're a porn mag, we'll skip to the second part of the DVD. "Household Hints From Adult Film Stars" features helpful advice with surefire titillation. Jenna Jameson demonstrates how to best clean silver candlesticks, Sydnee Steele offers pointers on fixing a dripping faucet, and Kobe Tai explains how to best pack for a long trip.

Janine's Got Male: Tawny Roberts yodels in the leading lady's vulva valley.

Janine is back for hetero action in Janine's Got Male.

Janine's Got Male

DIRECTOR: PAUL THOMAS. STARRING: JANINE, TAWNY ROBERTS, KIMBERLY KANE, MONIQUE ALEXANDER, SHY LOVE, EVAN STONE, DALE DABONE, NICK MANNING AND RICK PATRICK. DVD: VIVID.

I Porn superstar Janine is just now hitting her sexual peak. After years of legendary lez-only vids, the 35-year-old, busty blonde returns to the biz with a vengeance in Janine's Got Male. Now that she's doing guys (besides Vince Neil) on camera, Janine one-ups herself by banging two hombres at once for the first time in her life. Hardened XXX veterans Evan Stone and Dale Dabone are like kids in a candy store. Warming up for the historic occasion, Stone starts off by rimming Janine's fetching ass as the leading lady sucks Dabone's cock. She's truly flushed with excitement, fulfilling a personal fantasy of being pounded raw by a sturdy tag team. Also in the cast is gorgeous blonde Kimberly Kane, who could pass for Janine's younger sister. As a huge fan who's excited to be in Janine's movie, Kimberly goes all out to blow Nick Manning's mind. Plus, there's plenty of hot girl-on-girl action with Janine, Tawny Roberts, Monique Alexander and Shy Love. Janine's Got Male is her wildest and raunchiest movie ever.

—Kevin Wright

Secrets of a Porn Talent Scout #3

DIRECTOR: PETER ROMERO. STARRING: SUMMER, TARA BOND, SARAH BLAKE, KAYDEN, LYNN STAR, CHELSEA ROMERO, DESTINY ST. CLAIRE AND PETER ROMERO. DVD & VHS: HUSTLER VIDEO.

I The only problem with Secrets of a Porn Talent Scout #3 is that guys will want to strangle director/star Peter Romero for getting his hands on more hot pussy than they will ever see in their entire lifetimes. For barely legal lovers, the cast is jaw-dropping from top to bottom. The girls are not only sexy, but also sassy and fun-loving. Hungarian hottie Tara Bond loosens up more than ever, turning in one of her hottest performances to date. Sarah Blake's angelic smile is almost bigger than she is, but the perky little 18-year-old schoolgirl has a monstrous sexual appetite. So what does Secrets do with these insatiable sluts? All the honeys come crawling back for seconds. Each extended-length scene is packed with multiple pop-shots and endless action. Meanwhile, the POV camerawork courtesy of Mr. Romero is the next best thing to being in his shoes. The pussy-hogging director doesn't help a brother out by sharing any real tricks of the trade in Secrets of a Porn Talent Scout #3, but he has more than an eye for new talent.

Britney Rears Wild Backstage Sex Party: Yummy
Nyomi Marcela opens the front door for Tommy Gunn's arsenal.

Britney Rears: The luscious doll does double duty as a nympho pop star.

Sarah Blake burns rubber in Secrets of a Porn Talent Scout #3.

Even after being popped, Britney Rears goes bananas for more.

Tara Bond covertly works the pole in Secrets of a Porn Talent Scout #3.

Britney Rears Wild Backstage Sex Party

DIRECTOR: WILL RYDER. STARRING: BRITNEY REARS, NYOMI MARCELA, NICOLE BRAZZLE, TAKOTA, SERENA MARCUS, DAWN KELLY, MILA BRAZIL, MR. MARCUS, ANDREW ANDRETTI, BILLY GLIDE AND TOMMY GUNN DVD & VHS: XPLAY/VCA.

Q Question: What does a blonde say after having sex? Answer: "Are you guys all in the same band?" Welcome to the jaded existence of Jessica Sweet, a bubble-puppy, slutty pop star who trucks 'n' fucks all over the world. Portrayed to a T by Britney Rears, Jessica is an amiable, dumb-blond songbird whose sexploits are chronicled everywhere from the stage and pressroom to her tour bus, private jet and bedroom. This flick is an ambitious effort, stretching beyond porn's usually low-cost settings. Shot in an actual plane and other impressive locations, Backstage Sex Party will make you feel like you're on tour with a bona fide pop starlet. And let's not forget the sex, which is delivered in a huge way. The supporting cast, particularly Nyomi Marcela and Dawn Kelly, put out enthusiastically. As for Britney Rears, her two sex pairings rock. The cutie throws lips to the dick with abandon and lives up to her nom de porn with a great anal scene. Can hardly wait for a sequel: Oops, She'll Do It Again? —T.F.

BLASTS FROM THE PAST

A handful of companies are putting some XXX fodder from porn's Golden Age on store shelves, so check out the stuff back when muffs had hair and blue movies had plots.

First up, classic porn distributor Video-X-Pix has released three old-school titles: That Lucky Stiff, a hilarious 1980 production starring AVN Hall of Famers Samantha Fox, Candida Royalle, Randy West and Ron Jeremy. (In interview footage "The Hedgehog" reminisces about the good old days of adult filmmaking.) Slippery When Wet features busty 'n' brainy beauty Annie Sprinkle in a must-see sexual odyssey from her days in 1970s New York City. Meanwhile, Cheap Thrills stars AVN Hall of Famers Rhonda Jo Petty and Joey Silvera. Check out VideoPix.com for more vintage offerings with the likes of Seka, Desiree Cousteau, Little Oral Annie, John Holmes and other sinema legends.

VCA Classics is revisiting the porn store shelves with its late-'80s flicks Raw Talent II (showcasing Jamie Summers in one of her first screen appearances) and Raw Talent III. The latter stars XXX legend Ona Zee in a hilarious sex-ridden spoof of the porn industry. Check out VCApictures.com for more blasts from porn's unforgettable past.

Heatwave Entertainment has released a slew of memorable titles from the '80s and '90s: Hispanic XXX pioneer Alicia Rio stars in Summer Games; dirty blondes Victoria Paris and P.J. Sparxx resurface in Roman Goddess; Nubian fuckdoll Janet Jacme earns her keep in Black Is Back; Wendy Whoppers brings her mega-titties to Rocco Siffredi in Double Load; late porn princess/groupie to rock stars Savannah comes back with Savannah R.N.;

You can see outrageous Annie Sprinkle in all her glory in Slippery When Wet, recently re-released by Video-X-Pix.

and the wonderful Jeannie Pepper, considered to be the first African-American porn star, teams up with P.J. Sparxx in Prescription for Pleasure. Plus, you can catch Spantaneous Xtasty, before the ebony vixen's tits became small planets, in two of her early flicks: Crimson Thighs and The Players Club. For more information, venture online to HeatwaveVideo.com.

Finally, Big Top Digital and Boobsville.com present Top Ten Natural Busty Porn Stars of All Time, which culls the vintage work of bosomy delights Annie Sprinkle, Christy Canyon, the late, great Lisa DeLeeuw and more.

DIRECTOR: JAMES AVALON. STARRING: PENNY FLAME, ALICIA ALIGHOTTI, DILLAN LAUREN, DEJA DAIRE, HILLARY SCOTT, JULIA BOND, HOLLY WELLIN, SUNNY LANE, MISSY MONROE, KELLY WELLS, SEAN MICHAELS, JOHN STRONG, TOMMY GUNN, MARCUS LONDON, RANDY SPEARS, HERSCHEL SAVAGE, ALEX ROX, JOHN WEST, BILLY GLIDE AND ETHAN CAGE. DVD: RED LIGHT DISTRICT.

Mixing theoretical physics with hard-core pornography? Actually, it's an idea that's long overdue, and this film almost gets it right. Perhaps director James Avalon is deploying string theory, virtual reality and recovered memories as cheesy plot devices to string together lots of sex scenes in different locations, but who gives a rat's ass? It's tremendous to have such a gorgeous lead actress, Penny Flame, surrounded by so many sizzling female co-stars. A pool table is always great for demonstrating bodies in motion, and here the best shot is right into svelte Hillary Scott's turd tunnel, or maybe when she licks dripping man milk from sidekick Alicia Alighotti's little butt button. Sunny Lane is another standout, and her sweet pussy gets pounded from some nice angles. Although the acting and production values are well above average, and Penny Flame can be pretty amusing, the film sometimes degenerates into familiar, Euro-style surreal depravity. What's absolutely not essential for American audiences are pierced penises, Romeos donning fishnet stockings and other silliness.

—Max Jones

Penny Flame spreads for Billy Glide in Dark Side.

Mia Bangg makes Steven St. Croix's day in Sexual Auditions.

Sexual Auditions

DIRECTOR: CHUCK LORDS. STARRING: LEXIE MARIE, JACKIE MOORE, BIANCA PUREHEART, MIA BANGG, EVAN STONE, JERRY, KRIS SLATER, STEVEN ST. CROIX AND TRENT TESORO. DVD: VIVID.

i Lexie Marie is quickly becoming a major star in the XXX biz thanks to scorching performances like the pair she delivers in Sexual Auditions. Looking fit, tan and expertly enhanced, the hot blonde continues to knock 'em dead with her insatiable carnal energy. This is a Vivid feature, meaning the video quality is hi-def, and the girls are glamorous—especially Lexie when she's all dolled up for her second scene. Unlike most Vivid features, however, the plot is flimsier than a Brazilian bikini, and the sex is grittier than a faceful of used cat litter. Jackie Moore pulls off an anal piledriver, and Mia Bangg could beat Gumby at a limbo contest. Despite the all-blonde female cast, there's a surprising amount of diversity. Bianca Pureheart has a cute face reminiscent of Sunrise Adams, while voluptuous Ms. Moore gives off more of a Jessica Simpson vibe. At just 88 minutes, Sexual Auditions rushes through the motions, but Lexie Marie passes twice with flying colors.

—K.W.

Swallow My Pride #7's Megan Martinez is all business.

Swallow My Pride #7

i Swallow My Pride #7 has more bang for your buck than a cheap date with Annabel Chong. Despite having only five honeys (seven counting the DVD bonus scene with Ava Ramon and Victoria Sweet), the flick runs over three hours as each girl does essentially two scenes and swallows countless loads. The action is off the hook. Kelly Wells pulls off a double anal in the opening act, and Hillary Scott is held up in the air as she's being pounded up the ass. The nonanal scenes are arguably even hotter. Newcomer Daphne may be doing porn only as a side gig, but the sensual redhead could teach the full-timers a thing or two about giving fucking amazing blowjobs. Meanwhile, adorable 19-year-old Jackie Ashe is full of spunk even before she gets one eye glued shut by several well-placed loads. Considering how much semen they ingest, the stars of Swallow My Pride #7 should be bursting with pride.

GRIP AND CRAM JOHNSON ON THE CUMBACK TRAIL

PORN'S NASTY BROTHERS SPILL THE DIRT

AVN-award-winning producers

Grip and Cram Johnson have formed a new company called Chatsworth Pictures, which recently issued this official announcement: "The Johnson brothers first began producing movies three years ago, and now many, many blowjobs and herpes outbreaks later, they find themselves reinvigorated and once again eager to exploit young, misguided women for money. The chances of Chatsworth Pictures being Mark Wooded are pretty slim. The company will continue to feature the Johnsons' irreverent style and humor, and present the hardest, most deviant sex permitted by law."

"We're not making nectar videos here," says Cram. "Those are for guys trying to convince themselves they're not gay."

Along with nastier sex, hotter chicks and bigger budgets, Chatsworth Pictures has secured a distribution deal with JM Productions, leader in fuck-you-we'll-do-it-our-way entertainment.

"I've known Grip and Cram Johnson for a long time," says Jeff Stewart, JM's overlord and director of degradation, "but I didn't let that stop me from doing business with them. I just won't shake their hands or share needles with them."

The union with JM Productions makes perfect sense for the Johnson brothers. "Many people don't know this," Cram admits, "but Grip and I got our start as bukkake boys for JM. Grip missed Gia Regency's mouth and got his load on my leg. I punched him, and he apologized. We've been friends and business partners ever since. I don't even mind when he gets his cum on my leg anymore."

Chatsworth Pictures released its first feature, MILF Meat (an ode to motherhood and its tragic consequences) in November '05. "If you hate your mom for missing her abortion appointment, hence guaranteeing you a life of shame and misery," Cram promises, "MILF Meat will bring you much-needed inner peace. We punish these whores thoroughly."

"But we're fair about it," Grip interjects. "We give them an opportunity to explain their lack of parenting skills and common sense. After all, babies are the worse kind of STD you can get. It's so hard to get a coat hanger prescription."

MILF Meat stars real-life moms Delilah Strong, Desire More, Chelsea Zinn and Nicki Hunter. And in keeping with Grip and Cram's catering to their fans, the DVD also includes a very special BlowGenBlow Chronicles: Episode One bonus scene, showcasing pint-size dynamo Gen Padova and featuring a disturbingly insightful introduction by the Johnson brothers. Not to be missed!

"The secret to our success has always been our relationship with the fans," Grip declares. "We like to think of them as friends—friends who give us money."

Keep your eyes peeled for Chatsworth Pictures' second release, the whimsical romantic comedy Donkey Punch.

Distributors can place orders by contacting JM at 800-550-3659. For more information or to order videos retail, visit JerkoffZone.com.

The Closer's Alexis Amore seals the deal.

The Closer

DIRECTOR: PAUL ARMSTRONG. STARRING: STORMY DANIELS, LEZLEY ZEN, ALEXIS AMORE, AUSTIN KINCAID, CHEROKEE, BRAD ARMSTRONG, RANDY SPEARS, CHRIS EVANS, ERIC MASTERSON AND MICHAEL ANTHONY. DVD & VHS: WICKED PICTURES.

The culture police claim that porn is basically about male power trips, but in this Wicked outing the assembled bitches are definitely in the driver's seat. Bombshell Stormy Daniels portrays a "closer" brought in to boost sales at an auto dealership by teaching the mostly male staff to fuck the shit out of their customers and just about anyone else who comes along. Unfortunately, there are plenty of prolonged scenes with no sex, and even craven perverts like us won't get woodies watching unscrupulous salespeople on a used-car lot. The plot is plausible—and there's the fairly standard blowjobs, cunt-lapping, mish and doggy-style—but what's really worth mentioning is the acting. When good, it's amusing; it's even better when it's bad. You'll enjoy the fine lesbo 69 between Stormy and Austin Kincaid, and Lezley Zen sucking cock while attired in a natty business suit is very sick in the best possible way. In the end, The Closer overcomes some of its flaws by demonstrating the need for more sex in America's workplace. —M.J.

LIGHTS!...CAMERA!... ACTION! FOR GIRLS OF BEAVER HUNT

What a great idea this is, I thought to myself while observing the wild and dirty sex taking place before my eyes. But seasoned XXX jezebels weren't working up a sweat on the porn set I was visiting that day. The scenes I got to witness firsthand would be the template for a brand-new video series titled HUSTLER's Amateur Beaver Hunt.

With Beaver Hunt being one of HUSTLER Magazine's most popular features since Day One, Larry Flynt gave fast-rising director Will Ryder the green light to take the legspread snapshot format to dizzying heights. The exciting video line will showcase women from all over the country having sex in front of a camera for the very first time.

"Getting a girl to take a naked photo and send it in to HUSTLER for publication is awesome," Ryder remarked. "Getting her to participate in some gonzo sucking and fucking on-camera is a completely different thing."

Eliciting more No fucking, thank yous than *Yeah, I'll do that*s, the project still found enough willing souls to go into full production. In a matter of weeks I had the pleasure of catching the first crop of gorgeous, young recruits step into view, strip off their clothes and get ravished as the cameras rolled. What took place was nothing short of mind-boggling, as each new gal allowed a veteran porn stud to insert his huge cock into her less-than-professional mouth and holes.

"I'm not sure if I'd do this again," murmured a petite newbie named Michelle, "but since I love sex so much, I wanted to see what it would be like." With her fantastic blowjob and schtupping skills, the ravishing 18-year-old must be the pride of her hometown. Although Michelle was a bit uptight at first, porn stud Brett Rockman eased her fears, then burrowed his massive member deep inside her lithe body. The rookie soon found that her nervousness vanished the harder she sucked or clinched her partner's rigid pole.

"Oh, my God, I can't believe I'm doing this!" Michelle exclaimed during a water break before again bouncing up and down on Rockman's tool like a cowgirl riding a bucking bronco. Later, when director Ryder asked if she wanted some of the slippery stuff to ease the entry of a humongous schlong, she enthusiastically replied, "I don't need any lube!"

"No way, man!" Rockman howled in midstroke. "Her pussy is totally juicy all by itself." It was obvious to all on hand that this pretty young thing was totally turned on by having sex with somebody other than her boyfriend. In fact, a number of the video virgins in the debut volume of HUSTLER's Amateur Beaver Hunt (in stores now) ditched their significant others—temporarily or permanently—to try their luck in the hard-core biz.

Loretta, a soft-spoken Chicagoan, revealed that her guy wouldn't take kindly to his sweetheart shooting a porn video for HUSTLER. "Oh, shit, he would flip out!" Loretta squealed. "But I wanted to do this for me." During her sizzling sex scene, XXX starlet Nicole Brazzle joined in, creating a threeway designed to teach the neophyte how to handle herself like a pro. What ensued was a blistering session of clashing genitals, during which Sasha's ample rod penetrated each chick's snatch before sliding far inside Loretta's willing, moist mouth. This was sex the way it should be, as Loretta and her mentor offered up their bodies for some serious cock-pounding and delicious pussy-eating.

"That was incredible!" Loretta gasped, a man-size splattering of cum on her face and in her hair. Grabbing a towel, she lamented, "My boyfriend is gonna kill me!"

By calling for lights, camera and action, HUSTLER Video offers an arousing series that captures the natural sexual curiosity of each newcomer, while also exposing the expected concerns and anxieties of a local hottie taking a truly daunting plunge—getting it on for a vast, nationwide audience. HUSTLER's Amateur Beaver Hunt is perfect for all of us who like to see cute and sexy everyday babes getting the shit banged out of them. In fact, lovely Michelle (of the "I'm not sure if I'd do this again" comment) was so fascinated by the experience that she's had a change of heart and called a big-time L.A. agent. She's eager to work full-time as a porn queen.

—Steve Chandler

I would rock her world,
If I were with this girl.

VERONIKA RAQUEL & JUSTIN MAX IN FIDDLIN' ON THE ROOF

Then I'd come in her mouth,
Wipe my dripping cock right upon her face.
Then throw her out of my place.
All this I would do.
So would you.
If you were with this girl too.

(continued from page 11) were the cutting edge and the whole knife—and I thank you once again for standing up to defend my right to purchase porn.

T-rrific Apparel

I'm a big fan of all your magazines and movies. I was looking through some of my HUSTLERs from the 1970s and came across an ad for a HUSTLER T-shirt. Are those still on sale? —D.H.

A wide variety of T-shirts, including some retro items, can be ordered at HUSTLERhollywood.com.

So You Wanna Be a Porn Star?

Even though I live far from America, in the Himalayan kingdom of Nepal, I would be much delighted to get involved with HUSTLER and the porn world. As a matter of fact, I think I was born to be a porn star. I just love the sex world. Please tell me how I can enter the enchanting world of sex, glamour, pornography and money. Please have mercy on me. —Jack

Kathmandu, Nepal

Here are a few tips for Jack and all those guys who, over the years, have written us letters about getting into porn: Be in excellent shape, come to Los Angeles and don't go job-hunting without an ace in the hole. Jim South, who runs World Modeling (porn's premier talent agency) in Sherman Oaks, California, advises: "We need more girls. There's a glut of guys in the XXX biz; so be accompanied by a young lady of legal age who's willing to do scenes with you. You'll stand a much better chance of getting into the porn industry bringing your very own co-star."

Then call World Modeling at 818-986-4316. Good luck!

Total GWARefare

Thanks for printing a pretty good-sized piece on some of the coolest fuckers to ever breathe [HUSTLER, December '05]. I'm talking about GWARe, of course! It's amazing that I hadn't seen an article on the group in over a year. On the other hand, HUSTLER not only gave us a GWARe feature, but I also noticed that in your July '05 issue, frontman Oderus Urungus reviewed some XXX videos! You guys are fucking cool!

To all those who think HUSTLER and similar mags are nothing but trash, go fuck yourselves! And don't ever let us see you at a GWARe concert!

AUTUMN BLI

HOT IN THE CITY

PHOTOGRAPHY BY MATTI KLATT

SS

This is the first photo-shoot ever for Autumn Bliss, a 19-year-old sophomore at San Diego's Palomar College. "I can't believe I got to pose for HUSTLER!" she exclaims. "Thank you!" No, Autumn, thank you.

Wanting to stay in tip-top shape, the California cutie likes to play soccer. "I guess I'm into running around, getting sweaty and handling balls," she says. "Wait! That doesn't sound right." A hot chick who likes playing with balls? There's nothing wrong with that.

When it comes to her greatest sexual fantasy, this brunette beauty is the outdoorsy type. "I would love to have sex in the bed of a pickup truck on a rainy day," Autumn confides. "I'm a bit of an exhibitionist, and the idea of fucking as rain drizzles on my naked body makes my pussy sopping wet."

Autumn is unsure of what her future holds. "I thought I wanted to major in business," she says, "but then I gave nude modeling a try. Maybe a business suit isn't for me if I can make a good living in my birthday suit. Who knows? Maybe I'll meet the right man and just stay home and have babies." We're sure that Ms. Bliss won't have trouble finding any volunteers.

See Autumn Bliss bliss out in Barely Legal #52 on VHS and DVD from HUSTLER Video.

AIRWAVE GADFLY TALKS BACK

Outrageous radio talk show host Alex Bennett is the original Howard Stern—and remains Sirius Satellite Radio's hottest act. Over the years he's chatted with everyone from John Lennon to filmmaker John Woo. Now Bennett sits down with HUSTLER to discuss the war on terror and the war on free speech.

BEYOND TREASON

Joyce Riley is a registered nurse, a former Air Force captain and a veteran of the first Gulf War. The leading voice in the effort to expose the "mystery illness" of Gulf War Syndrome, she is now working tirelessly as a full-time activist for veterans' rights. In a shocking interview, Riley exposes the disturbing truth about how the government continues to conduct medical experiments on unwitting American soldiers.

TARA REID: Q&A WITH HOLLYWOOD'S "TIT" GIRL

After repeatedly gracing our pages with her boob-baring antics, infamous Hollywood party girl and American Pie star Tara Reid opens up for HUSTLER readers during an in-depth conversation with Howard Stern Show regular Chauncey Hayden.

NAKED CELEBRITIES

Former child stars Christina Ricci and Anne Hathaway turn the tide by displaying their boobies! You may remember Hathaway as a Disney actress who starred alongside Julie Andrews in The Princess Diaries movies. Now she's our bitch. Also in various states of undress are Jenny McCarthy and Saved by the Bell has-been Tiffani Thiessen!

SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE

Want to quell a protest? Stage one? Or take over a civilian population? Now you can! Just hire your own private army. Mercenaries, or "security contractors" as they prefer to be called, can be mobilized anywhere for any job if the price is right. Where is this happening? Only hours after Hurricane Katrina lashed New Orleans, private forces—armed with assault rifles—worked their way through the flooded streets, took over an office building, threw the furniture out the window and set up headquarters. Report by Harry Walsh.

DOGGY-STYLE

Finally, with the help of Family Guy creator Seth MacFarlane, we catch up with Brian, the wisecracking, cocktail-swilling pooch from Fox's hit show. TV's most candid canine reveals his true feelings about Bush, Stewie, Snoopy and Ashton Kutcher. Brian also discusses his XXX directorial debut, disclosing what he really did with Jenna Jameson. Plus, get in on our huge Family Guy giveaway!
